Sir Samuel Wept
Will War Ever End?
Hanging Might Help
Ethiopia's Religion

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.

When England backed down on the plan to avoid danger of European war by giving Italy a big slice of Ethiopia, it was pitiful to see Sir Samuel Hoare playing the part of government scapegoat, shedding tears, as he described the dividing up plan with France to avoid bloodshed.

You may have read here when the trouble started that the British would not go through with their League of Nations sanctions if there was any danger of England finding herself fighting Italy all alone.

Fighting alone is no part of the British program, when it can be avoided.

England's attitude is revealed in the House of Commons speech by Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who said:

"We are prepared to take our part and agree to imposition of sanctions IF we are satisfied that all League members are prepared to take their part in meeting an attack which might be sudden and unexpected."

He made it plainer, he emphasized England's dislike of any private fight with the complex Mussolini, when he said:

"We would ask from the powers what we have asked from France in particular—the most complete assurance that they would come to our aid if we were attacked by Italy."

Italy has not asked anybody to come to her aid. Perhaps Mussolini realizes that five hundred or a thousand Italian planes operating along the sides of a triangle from Hyde Park gate to Buckingham Palace, and to the House of Commons, thence to the Stock Exchange and the Bank of England, returning to Hyde Park gate via the Bond street and Curzon street shopping district, could promote peace without outside help.

In America we know what one gunman with one gun can do in a roomful of ordinary men not prepared for attack. Europe has yet to learn what could be done by one nation, made desperate, with a flock of airplanes.

Judge Richard W. Leche, candidate for governor of Louisiana, challenges his opponent, Congressman Cleveland Dear, to fight a duel with pistols. The congressman declines the honor and the people call it amusing.

It would not have been amusing 100 years ago. Then to decline a duel might have cost Congressman Dear all chance of election.

In earlier days the so-called upper classes usually settled their differences by the duel. noblemen rode out surrounded by retainers and fought each other on a bigger scale.

Common sense and ridicule have killed off individual dueling, but nations still settle their quarrels by wholesale murder. When, if ever, will international dueling cease and permanent peace arrive?

H. P. Burton, editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine, discusses that question in the current issue, with contributions by several, including this writer.

Some would say, "We shall never have an end of war, permanent peace." they would have said at an earlier date, "We can never have an end of cannibalism," a little later, "We can never have the end of slavery."

But all those horrors did end and war will end, but probably not until there is established somewhere on earth a dominant race or an aggregation of dominant races for peace.

Notifying rulers of nations that any one of them starting a war would be executed, after the war and his conquest, might be wise.

The Kaiser and King George are cousins.

That may have been a mistake. One kaiser hanged might discourage half a dozen Hitlers. That imperial Kaiser hanging should have been carried out only after convicting the Kaiser beyond doubt of responsibility for the big war, which was by no means proved.

Old Ethiopian paintings, showing the battle of Adowa, describe King Menelik beating the Italians in a "war between Christians and Catholics."

Like many others, Ethiopians think their religion is the original, only genuine religion. Their Coptic Church goes far back of our Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist churches, but not as far back as the Catholic church, which, according to Catholic au-

FOLEY PROBES EXPENSES OF DR. MACKEY

A probe of the campaign expenditures of Dr. Charles A. Mackey, chairman of the Boston School Committee, is under way by District Attorney Foley, it was learned today.

This was disclosed when it became known that an investigator for the district attorney had called at the city clerk's office to inspect the itemized expenses filed by candidates.

Another new development also came in the disclosure of alleged solicitation of a bribe of $2000 from a Boston University professor for "fixing" an appointment as supervisor of music.

This was on the heels of a charge of solicitation of a $1500 bribe of the Cambridge Supervisor of Music, Benedict Fitzgerald to "fix" the same post for him.

The investigation relative to the alleged attempt to "fix" the post of supervisor of music for one or more men came when it was learned that District Attorney

HULL GUILTY IN $33,000 THEFT

John T. Hull, of Grove street, Leominster, son of the former head of the State Utilities Department, was found guilty by Judge Joseph A. Sheehan in Superior Court today of larcenies totaling $28,000 from investors.

Case was continued until January 21 for disposition by request of defense counsel.

Hull was found guilty of four counts involving the larceny of $12,500 of bonds from the Cambridge Visiting Nurse Association; $8000 of bonds from Charles Toppan, treasurer of the organization; $5100 of securities from Ida Graham, of Woburn, and $3000 of securities from Stanwood H. Cooke.

Hull was found not guilty on three other counts.

Charges were made against both Jansen and Hull of alleged larcenies from former clients of the firm of Andrew Jensen, Jr.

According to Assistant Attorney General Henry P. Fielding, prosecuting attorney, a "buckstring" indictment is still outstanding against Hull and Jensen.

5 MILLION JOB OKAY ASKED

Mayor Mansfield today asked the Boston City Council to give its approval to the legislative act providing for additions to the Suffolk County Courthouse, costing $5,000,000.

The Council, meeting in special session at noon, accepted the mayor's request without comment and referred the matter to its executive committee.

In making his request, the mayor said he had been unofficially informed the Federal government is prepared to allocate its share of the cost under the PWA immediately.

This sum is estimated at $2,157,000. It is expected the Council will take favorable action on the matter at its meeting early next week.

Blood Clue In Thelma Mystery

Thelma's Life Story

The third chapter of the interesting story of the glamorous life of Thelma Todd, as written by Ann Marsters, will be found on Page 3.

Hollywood, Dec. 21 (INS)—The sweeping grand jury investigation to be opened Monday into the death of glamorous Thelma Todd will encompass every angle of the case.

Stars of the screen will be called before the grand jury in an effort to clear up the mystery surrounding the garage death of the blonde actress. They will be called not so much because they might have direct knowledge of the circumstances of her death, but to determine if there was a motive which might have caused a "monoxide murder."

Joe Louis Dead? Bomber Says 'No!'

An erroneous radio report today said Joe Louis, Negro heavyweight boxer, had been killed in an auto accident.

But Joe is very much alive—and, through a bodyguard in Chicago, denied the report for the 10th time in three months.

No one was allowed to see the "Brown Bomber" in his hotel suite, but a giant Negro policeman, stationed outside his door, conferred with him and then came out to announce that Joe had just eaten a hearty breakfast.

BRITISH SEEK U. S. OIL BAN ON ITALY

Paris, Dec. 21 (INS)—A British move to call Italy to account in the League court as a violator of the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact, so as to win co-operation of the United States, one of the pact's authors, in an oil embargo was forecast in authoritative French circles today.

Oil sanctions against Italy can never be effective unless oil is legally defined in Washington as essential to warfare, according to the view here.

"During the coming week there is likely to be a great effort to persuade President Roosevelt to take a more rigid stand on the neutrality act," wrote Fernand de Brinon, one of Premier Laval's closest advisers in L'Information.

"If the oil embargo is to go through, it will be necessary first

Mother, 2 Girls Die In Fire

Warwick, R. I., Dec. 21—A mother and the two daughters she sought to save were burned to death and her husband and two sons injured in a fire here today.

The dead are:

MRS. GLADYS BARRETT, 36.
GLADYS BARRETT, 8.
MILDRED BARRETT, 2.

Injured were:

JOSEPH BARRETT and the sons, Wallace, 14, Earl, 11.

The flames which destroyed their home consumed the victims and nearly resulted in similar fate for the male members of the household.

Mrs. Barrett perished when she returned to the house after once reaching safety and sounding an alarm. She sought to rescue the two daughters, and is believed to have died in the same room with them.

Barrett, who was aroused by his wife's screams, led his two sons through the smoke to a window on the second floor and dropped them to the roof of an ell on the first floor. They were slightly injured.

The husband then sought to reach his wife and daughters, whom he knew had not made their exit. Just as he reached the stairs leading to their room, a sudden belch of flame broke through a wall. His face was seared and his clothing ignited.

He fell at the foot of the stairs, managed to crawl to the door and was hauled to safety by the two sons he had rescued.

MAYOR ASKS WALSH MAKE PLEA TO U. S.

Long lines of unpaid WPA workers seeking welfare food slips again formed in Greater Boston communities as police details were ordered out by officials fearing possible outbreaks.

The situation was characterized as desperate in many of the cities and towns.

With 1200 Somerville WPA workers facing discharge because of failure of the city to provide materials, Mayor James E. Hagan called the fourth special meeting of the Board of Aldermen in as many nights.

Workers have been payless there for three weeks.

SHOPPERS JAM STORES IN BUYING RUSH

That next Wednesday will be the merriest Christmas Day in years became a certainty today as thousands of men and women marched on downtown Boston and proceeded to shatter all sales, mail, traffic and transportation records.

Shoppers thronged the stores favoring particularly the luxury departments — perfumes, jewelry, negligees, furs. Even the overworked sales-people found them a delight, for they knew what they wanted and they didn't haggle over prices.

Department store heads were in unanimous agreement that this year's Christmas sales will top all others since 1928. They pointed out that for the first time in years the holiday shoppers were spending with a freedom and gaiety that has been absent for years.

TRAVEL SETS RECORD

Another happy sign, and one particularly pleasing to transport officials, was the unprecedented back-to-the-home movement. Railroads

MACKEY CAMPAIGN EXPENSES UNDER PROBE BY FOLEY

Foley had asked Professor Joseph Wagner of Boston University, to appear at his office and tell what he knows of the attempt of a "bagman" to obtain $2,000 to "swing" the job.

This bagman is said to have asked for $1,400 after the first offer was rejected.

Maurice A. Tobin's expenses were readily available. Dr. Mackey's had not yet been filed, it was learned, although the last day for filing was November 18.

TWO RE-ELECTED

As Dr. Mackey and Tobin were the only members of the school board re-elected this year, they are the only ones in whose campaign expenses the district attorney's office is interested.

The third man elected to the board this fall was Henry J. Smith, but he does not take office until next month.

The persons listed as contributors to Tobin's campaign fund included The Battery Associates of Roxbury, $100; Tobin's brother, James G., of Roxbury, and the committeeman's publicity director, Andrew Dazzi of West Roxbury, each of whom contributed $100.

OTHERS LISTED

Also David A. Noonan, $200; John A. Dorgan, $50; Walter Glynn, $50; William Graham, $25; Leo Carroll, $100; Jay Edwards Club, $125; Frank Harrington, $5; Raymond Galvin, $50; John Lynch, $5; George Hyland, $50, and John J. Moriarty, $50.

14-DAY LIMIT

So secretly was the campaign expense investigation begun, that although the visit to the city clerk's office was made just before closing time Thursday, it became known only today.

Under the law regarding the filing of campaign expenditures, candidates are required to file within 14 days of the election.

Tobin's report was filed the last day, Nov. 19.

Dr. Mackey had been officially notified of his failure to make a return, and has been given until December 20 to submit it to the city clerk. Then the matter would pass into Attorney-General Paul A. Dever's hands, it was stated.

Should Dever find that a return had still not been made, he could either take action himself, or refer the matter to District Attorney Foley.

Tobin's expense statement listed a total of campaign receipts of $2460, it was reported and a total expenditure of $2403.61.

Of that amount, $1300 went to Lawrence Shea Advertising Agency, $382 to the Parker House, $237 for postage and $409 for Libbis Printing Company.

While the investigation was in progress, Dr. Mackey released a statement in which he revealed himself as the "innocent means" by which alleged "bagmen" preyed on substitute teachers with a promise of permanent jobs.

Superintendent of Schools Patrick T. Campbell, when asked to comment on Dr. Mackey's statement today, said:

"I have not read Dr Mackey's statement, and would not make any statement if I had. I have done my duty, and that's all I wish to say."

A second probe into alleged corruption in connection with the Boston school department along a much wider front will begin immediately after grand jury action is taken against two alleged bagmen in a job selling plot.

This was indicated today by District Attorney Foley when he said that evidence of extortion of money from school supply dealers has been uncovered during the present investigation.

More than 30 witnesses will appear before the grand jury on Monday to tell their stories of the alleged attempt by the two bagmen to sell permanent teaching jobs to temporary teachers for $150 each.

21 SUMMONSES OUT

Summonses for witnesses have already been served, District Attorney Foley said, and at least 12 more will be served today and tomorrow.

It was said that six more witnesses, whose names have come to light in the inquiry thus far, will be questioned today by Foley and his aides, Assistant District Attorneys Frederick T. Doyle and Garrett H. Byrne.

Perhaps the most important evidence for prosecution of the proposed indictments against the two bagmen was given by Andrew Evers, of West Cedar street, Beacon Hill, a school supplies salesman, it was said.

This evidence, it was revealed, was to the effect that Evers was approached by the two bagmen after he sold $1300 worth of supplies to the school department.

He was told that if he did not pay $250 to the bagmen as "commission" he would never sell the department any more supplies.

Evers is said to have told Foley that he paid the money. He will appear before the grand jury to repeat his statement, Foley said.

Another witness who looms as a "key witness" was William W. Drummey, superintendent of construction for the school house commission.

He is said to have given corroborative evidence that the bagmen solicited fees from an architect who was working on plans for schoolhouse building.

MACKEY STATEMENT

In a lengthy statement, Dr. Mackey said:

"I have never in my life been involved in a single corrupt practice. Since becoming a member of the Boston School Committee I have adhered strictly to my trust and I have always upheld the integrity of my board.

"My record is an open one for the public to examine at its will. If anyone has ever used my name in connection with school promotions of teachers, the granting of school contracts, planes, equipment, etc., he did so by misrepresenting me.

"I never accepted a gratuity in connection with my work on the school committee and never authorized, nor would I permit, accepting any form of gratuity in connection with my work as a school committeeman."

KNOWS "BAGMAN"

Of the two "bagmen" against whom indictments will be sought, Dr. Mackey said:

"I know both these men. I know them very well. By inference one has been described as my campaign manager and the other as my chauffeur. Neither of them have been my manager or my chauffeur.

"One of them has been a pal of mine for 25 years and has enjoyed the hospitality of my home for years. He has enjoyed my confidence for years and has enjoyed the privilege so far as to open my mail at home.

"But at no time has he been given permission, inferentially or otherwise, to represent me in any transactions involving the school committee or to represent himself as a bagman.

ALWAYS GENTLEMAN

"The other is an acquaintance of a year. He has always proved to be a gentleman. Nor has he been given my permission to represent me in any transaction or in any matter, much less to misrepresent himself, as alleged, as a bagman. I still find it difficult to believe that either of these men is guilty of the charges being made against them.

"This will be decided, however, in the next few days. Whatever the grand jury decision in the matter is, it will be my decision. If either of these men did use my private office in the school committee rooms, he has used this office and abused the privilege. They ought to be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, if they are bagmen, so-called."

Important Figures in Boston Schools Inquiry

DR. CHARLES E. MACKEY — MISS GENEVIEVE MACKEY — DR. JOSEPH V. LYONS

Aiding in the widespread inquiry now under way into activities of "bagmen" preying upon the Boston School Department, are Dr. Charles E. Mackey, chairman of the board, upper left, with his sister, Miss Genevieve Mackey, and Dr. Joseph V. Lyons, upper right. Dr. Mackey is revealed as the "innocent means" by which the alleged bagmen operated with promises of permanent jobs to temporary teachers. Miss Mackey, a substitute, was asked to attend a meeting regarding jobs, but was told to stay away by her brother. Dr. Lyons denied having any connection with the alleged bagmen's activities.

SHOPPERS CLOG STORES, TRAFFIC

steamships, bus and air lines reported a record rush from the thousands who are flocking from all parts of the country to be home for the most joyous holiday on the calendar.

It was estimated that this year's increase in travel over last year may be from 20 to 45 or 50 per cent. The New Haven Railroad has ordered into service 60 extra trains and 796 additional passenger coaches.

Other roads are also making special arrangements to handle the vast hordes of holiday travelers.

Travel bureaus in Harvard square reported that students residing in the Far West are mostly taking the air route home for the holidays. After the last classes closed, many a Harvard boy dashed by taxi to the Boston airport and boarded a plane.

MOUNTAINS OF MAIL

Airways are so crowded that, according to one travel agency in Harvard square, one cannot get a ticket on a plane leaving Boston for two days to come, and couldn't for the last two days, either.

Probably one of the busiest men in town is Postmaster Peter F. Tague, who sees an all-time high in the volume of mail.

He urged that all mailing be done today at the latest, adding the warning that there are to be no deliveries on the holiday. Every effort, he declared, will be made to deliver all mail by Christmas.

More than 35,000,000 pieces of mail have gone through the post-office channels. Last year's total was 60,000,000. With three more days to go, Postmaster Tague is confident that the 1935 total will top that figure.

Throughout the day, armies of shoppers thronged downtown Boston, overflowing the sidewalks and impeding traffic. Only the good-natured efficiency of the traffic officers averted serious accidents in many cases. The particular point of congestion was the intersection of Summer and Washington streets, where the pace necessarily never exceeded covered-wagon speed.

Missing Girl Hunted

State police today were asked to locate Gertrude Cauthier, 15-year-old Middleboro girl missing since September 24 and last heard of in Boston two weeks ago.

No Snow in Sight For Christmas

Although winter starts officially at 1:30 a. m. tomorrow, indications are that Christmas in Boston will offer nothing unusual in the matter of weather conversation.

Next Wednesday's temperatures will probably be normal or in the neighborhood of 32 degrees, according to Weather Forecaster G. Harold Noyes. He was afraid he couldn't really promise any snow for Santa Claus, either. He said:

"It is pretty difficult to forecast Boston's Christmas weather so far in advance but nothing outstanding is in respect at the present time. Indications are that it will be just about normal."

On the other frost-bitten hand, Fairbanks, Alaska, is enjoying zero temperature today and at White River, on the north shore of Lake Superior, it is 40 degrees below zero.

Mailed Summons Missed by York

Worcester, Dec. 21 (AP)—A change of address was given by police officials this morning as the reason why Samuel A. York, recently deposed conservation commissioner, claims he knows nothing of speeding charges lodged against him.

According to police, York was supposed to appear in district court here this morning to answer charges of speeding in Leicester.

In Boston, he said he knew nothing about it and would not appear in district court, as he didn't. A new summons went out this morning, mailed to York's Cambridge address. No date was set, however.

POLITICS AND GOVERNMENT

"No officer (of the government) should be permitted to take part in the management of political organizations, caucuses, conventions or election campaigns. Their right to vote and to express their views on public questions, either orally or through the press, is not denied, provided it does not interfere with the discharge of their official duties. No assessment for political purposes on officers or subordinates should be allowed."

CITY CASH SEIZED

Worcester Attaches Lowell Till

Lowell, Dec. 21—Armed with a court order directing him to seize the effects of the city of Lowell, Deputy Sheriff Loring R. Kew today stripped the city treasury of its entire cash reserve of $2450 to pay a court judgment Lowell owes to the city of Worcester.

Money was due Worcester for the welfare care of Lowell citizens there.

City Treasurer Charles R. Flood was forced to take money received today in the liquor license bureau to carry on city business for the remainder of the day.

Meanwhile, trouble was visited on the city from another point, when notices were filed at the clerk's office that a $14,000 suit would be brought against the city by 14 Lowell officials seeking transportation expenses.

Fund Lack Bars Welfare Extras

Santa Claus will have no extra packages to drop off at the homes of Boston's welfare recipients, John C. L. Dowling, director of public welfare department, said today.

Dowling stated there were no funds available to purchase "extras." The regular allotment of federal food will be distributed.

He said every effort would be made to provide fuel for needy families.

Ship Boom Falls, Hurts 2 Workmen

Two longshoremen were injured today when the loading boom of the S.S. Braheholm, at the Mystic docks, Charlestown, snapped and fell on them.

The men, Eugene White, 65, married, of 56 Pine Ridge road, West Medford, and Matthew O'Connell, 60, married, of 149 Garfield avenue, Chelsea, were removed to the Haymarket Relief Hospital in a police ambulance.

Prey of "Bagmen," He Says

This school probe witness, Andrew Evers of West Cedar street, Beacon hill, is alleged to have testified that "bagmen" approached him with a demand for $250 "commission" on school supplies which he had sold to the city.

FEAR DISORDER IN CHELSEA

dreds of payless workers grew hourly more restless.

Quincy welfare officials reported the heaviest day's application in history as food slips to hundreds were handed out.

Approximately 1900 WPA workers here have gone unpaid for two to three weeks.

SPEED WORK

Meanwhile, PWA paymasters throughout the state were ordered to work all day Saturday and tomorrow to insure every unpaid worker receiving his check Monday.

State Administrator Arthur G. Rotch again promised that all but a very few would be paid before Christmas.

Appealing to Senator David I. Walsh to lead a Massachusetts delegation of protest to President Roosevelt, Mayor Quigley of Chelsea termed the end of the situation now existing, saying:

"With the exception of two small projects, the relief workers of Chelsea who commenced work on November 25 still remain unpaid.

"If the situation is not relieved at once you may expect rebellion not only of unfortunate pawns of theories, but of volunteer city officials who have sacrificed much."

PARADES AVERTED

Mobilization, parades and protest meetings have only been averted so far, he added, by the aid of local welfare departments.

Somerville's crisis continued today when last night's meeting of the Board of Aldermen rejected an order calling for the purchase of $75,000 of WPA materials.

Another order will be introduced at tonight's meeting by Mayor James E. Hagan.

SOME CHEERFUL REPORTS

From other sections of the state, however, came the first encouraging WPA news in weeks.

Paul Rivers and Taunton reported that all workers had been paid to date and new projects were being started to fill quotas.

Sharp decreases in welfare applications were immediately felt in these communities.

In Haverhill and Lawrence workers have received their checks to date and it is expected that checks due Monday will arrive on time.

CHECKS PASSED OUT

In Revere, 1,700 of the 1200 workers, unpaid for several weeks, were reported to be receiving their checks today.

Meanwhile, from Washington came word that all WPA employes were to be given day-and-a-half holidays with pay at Christmas and New Years.

North Chelmsford, Dec. 21 (AP)—Pay envelopes of the 225 employes of the George C. Moore Wool Scouring Co. today contained an extra $72—a Christmas bonus.

Edgar Dixon, general manager, said the money amounted to 5 per cent of each employe's annual salary and that it was paid because the workers were loyal and the year's business had been profitable.

to obtain complete American cooperation.

"It is realized in London that the port of Corpus Christi in Texas every days sees numerous ships sailing with oil for Italy; that a private company has made an agreement for 1936 of daily delivery of 4000 barrels of oil at a price slightly higher than normal; and that a gangster fleet is ready to replace. If necessary, the special ships which belong to companies placed under financial obligations to the United States government."

Britain Pushes Drive For War Defense Allies

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

London, Dec. 21—The British government was stated by a reliable source today to be considering further precautionary measures against the possibility of a warlike act on the part of Premier Mussolini in Italy.

A meeting of the council of the League of Nations to discuss mutual defenses was mentioned but was not confirmed officially.

In government offices, however, it was confirmed that steps have been taken to see what support by other nations could be mobilized in the event of a warlike move.

PROMISES OF SUPPORT

It was said that the inquiries had been encouraging. Thus far the British government has confined its approach to Mediterranean powers.

A British officer in Cairo informed the Associated Press correspondent that it would require "a bigger and more mobile force than the Italian army in Eritrea to penetrate Egypt from Libya."

Informed military sources in Egypt said that in the event of an attack from Libya, Great Britain would start camps in a serious defense of the Egyptian border, but would adopt harrying tactics with light tanks and airplanes and would depend upon the vast desert stretching from Libya to the Nile to defeat the invader.

BRITISH TANKS MOBILIZE

For some time past, said the advices from Cairo, Great Britain has been mustering tanks in the vicinity of Mersa Matruh, near the border.

However, Great Britain has not made a large concentration of either men or equipment there. The force of British troops has been estimated at not more than 3000.

Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, who has been mentioned widely as a possible new foreign secretary, expounding the policy of application of war penalties against Italy, told Conservative party workers at Birmingham:

"I trust the nations of the League will show that they are prepared to make themselves resist any attack which may be made on any one of their number.

"The peace proposals are dead and they have already been buried at Geneva. They will not be revived presently, and I suppose all attempts at peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war) must be considered at an end.

"We must, therefore, go back to the policy of sanctions."

Il Duce Defiant, Calls More Troops

Rome, Dec. 21 (U8) — Premier Mussolini has ordered 16,000 more troops to the Ethiopian front and the Libya-Egypt frontier, and, at the sanctions, he officially laughed at the Franco-British peace plan and informed the world that Italy intends to conquer Ethiopia whether the League of Nations likes it or not.

Mussolini's triple-pronged challenge to England and the League was accomplished in a day climaxed by a meeting of the Fascist grand council at which Il Duce's son-in-law, Count Galeazo Ciano — commander of the "Death's Head" aerial squadron on the Northern Ethiopian front — reported on the progress of the war. Ciano who is home on leave, was elected to membership on the council.

350 of Italian Army Slain, Ethiopians Claim

Dessye, Ethiopia, Dec. 21 (Reuters)—Ethiopians asserted today 150 Italian white troops and 200 Italian natives were killed in a hand-to-hand fight at Enda Silasi, near Aksum, on the northern front.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 21—An Ethiopian government communique reported today the vangard of Dedjamaich Ayele's troops on the northern front recaptured Enda Silasi, 30 miles west of Aksum, and Degs Shah from the Italians.

"The Italian troops were considerable," the communique said.

"Our forces captured 28 machine guns, two trucks, two automobiles and seven white Italian prisoners.

Asmara, Eritrea, Dec. 21 (AP)—Italian planes bombed and routed an Ethiopian column of 3000 between Quoram and Lake Ashangi today, said reports to Italian headquarters.

The Ethiopians were said to have suffered many casualties, and to have replied to the bombing with strong anti-aircraft fire.

Ethiopia Expels Three as Spies for Italians

Addis Ababa, Dec. 21 — Three foreigners were expelled from Ethiopia today on charges of espionage and pro-italian activities.

Suicide Verdict in Girl Shooting

Ayed, Dec. 21 (AP)—A finding of "accidental shooting or suicide" was filed today by Judge Lyman K. Clark in the death, Nov. 29, of Gwendoline F. Gallagher, 20, from shotgun wounds.

The motive for suicide, Judge Clark said, "was uncertain or a matter of conjecture." The evidence given at an inquest, he added, failed to explain how the girl could have shot herself. The shotgun was quite long and the wound was in the head.

thority, began with St. Peter himself, or even earlier, since St. Peter was the rock upon which Christ's teachings were founded. Tu est Petrus, written around the inside of St. Peter's dome, tells about it.

With respect to Uncle Sam, you cannot avoid comparing him with the confidence man's "come-on." To make the world safe for democracy, and to help his dear friends in Europe, who, of course, would repay him, he sent ten billion dollars, and none of the money came back.

Then he decided to help silver on this continent by buying silver produced here at a price beyond the dreams of avarice, but he would not buy silver produced away from this continent.

Promptly great hoards of silver in China were passed through Japan, then "bootlegged" into the United States, and Uncle Sam discovers himself buying Chinese silver.

He might have found it out sooner. Chinese silver is not as pure as standard American silver and might be melted all over again.

Now America says, "I won't play any more," and stops buying.

Was Bret Harte right? Are there really "Heathen Chinese" and other Asiatics smarter than Uncle Sam's innocent nephews?

You read that Mussolini "votes" eighty-two million dollars more for the war in Africa and you wonder where he gets it all. What could he do if he had Uncle Sam's ten thousand million dollars gold that lie buried under ground?

Italian soldiers and manufacturers will take any kind of money Mussolini will give them. They must. Also, Italy, deeply in earnest, has contributed one hundred tons of gold, including millions of wedding rings given by Italian women. Mussolini does not need pretty ladies singing on the backs of elephants in the streets to stimulate giving, as we did in this country during our interesting "Liberty Bond Drive" to raise billions for Europe that Europe forgot to send back.

For three years in succession Illinois has been able to do without any state real estate tax and has collected none. Sales tax, liquor licenses and imposts make the old state real estate tax unnecessary. That does not apply to city real estate taxes. They go on gaily, climbing higher.

In some cities the single tax gentlemen would do real estate owners a favor if they would take their land and free them from taxes, especially if they would take the mortgages also.

SCREEN OFFER FOLLOWED VICTORY

(This is the third installment of the life story of Thelma Todd—the girl who rose from the obscurity of a Lawrence high school student, to a dazzling career in Hollywood, which ended with her tragic death. Yesterday's installment told of her first professional stage appearance in a local theater.)

By ANN MARSTERS

CHAPTER 3

A modest, slightly old-fashioned little girl, with golden curls that tumbled almost below her knees, graduated with honors from the Lawrence high school in 1923. She was just 16, and her name was Thelma Todd.

The following year she entered the Massachusetts Normal School at Lowell, completely convinced that she was on her way to be a school teacher.

When she was 18 she won the first beauty contest she ever entered—and the demure little teacher-to-be became the potential movie star of the moment.

Thelma Todd hadn't really wanted to go into that contest. She considered herself no more beautiful than many of the girls at Normal school. But she finally entered, because her mother and father seemed anxious that she try, and her friends insisted that she was sure to win.

Wins Title

She became "Miss Lawrence" in the preliminary contest. A few days later she acquired the title of "Miss Massachusetts."

The newspaper accounts of that day enlarged upon the fact that "Miss Thelma Todd, 18, of 590 Andrews street, Lawrence, was picked by the Massachusetts Elks convention in Swampscott as the most beautiful girl competing."

She gave her first interview to the press, which consisted briefly of:

"I hate people who are not natural. I hate people who are stuck up, and I hate hypocrites. Aside from that, I get along with everyone."

And her mother talked, then, of how she kept her daughter's hair so gloriously shining and golden—for everyone was raving about Thelma's hair. And Mrs. Todd's receipt may still be as fine as any.

"I have always taken care of Thelma's hair myself," she said. "Since she was a little girl I have given her simple egg shampoos once a week.

"I take two eggs and beat them up just as you do for a cake," said Mother Todd. "Then I rub it into Thelma's hair, leave it under a towel till it's dry and then wash it off with soap and water. Even during the war, when eggs were hard to get, Thelma had her shampoo. Frequently I went without them just to take care of it."

For Thelma Todd was becoming a celebrity.

Four days before she became "Miss Massachusetts" an amazing and significant thing happened. She received a telegram inviting her to pay a visit to the Paramount motion picture studio in Astoria, Long Island, as a guest of the corporation.

So she and her mother made ready for the trip, promising faithfully to let nothing prevent her returning on time for the beauty contest finals.

She was driven to Boston by a carload of cheering friends and took the Knickerbocker Limited for New York.

"From Sticks"

She was met at the Grand Central station by Paramount officials, including Al Wilkie, a veteran head of the studio department, who later confessed that he had complained bitterly at being asked to meet another "beauty from the sticks."

"I was pretty well fed up on the whole thing the morning Thelma arrived," he said afterwards, "but Thelma changed all that."

At the studio a luncheon was given in her honor, and she had her first sight of pictures in the making.

The next day she met Jesse Lasky. Here, actually, was a "movie magnate" in the flesh—and "the little girl from the sticks" could only stare at him with wide blue eyes.

Lasky said little—but he saw a great deal. He saw, for one thing, amazing possibilities in Thelma Todd.

He told her, briefly, of his plan to establish a school of motion picture acting and asked her if she would like to try it, if the plan went through.

Thelma, of course, said "yes" with all the eagerness she could muster, and the interview was ended.

The last thread of her teaching ambitions slipped away, and she and her mother took the night train—headed for Swampscott and the title of "Miss Massachusetts."

(The Boston Sunday Advertiser tomorrow will print the first three installments of this life story of Thelma Todd, with a NEW fourth chapter. You can begin the story then and follow it in Monday's Boston Evening American.)

Quaint though this post-war style of hairdressing appears today, it's not really long at all since beautiful Thelma Todd was wearing her luxuriant tresses this way. She was just 16 then, and these curls were long enough to reach her knees.

Appearing at a dance recital of Theresa Sheridan while still a school girl, the Lawrence beauty already showed signs of the dramatic ability which was to help make Thelma Todd one of Hollywood's best known comediennes before her tragic death.

REFLECTIONS OF DEAD STAR'S YOUTHFUL BEAUTY

Thelma Todd Blood Clue Found in Car

vestigators worked feverishly in preparation for the grand jury probe, police rested on their oars. Captain Bert Wallis today expressed himself as being convinced Miss Todd's death was accidental.

POSSIBILITY OF MURDER

On the other hand Deputy District Attorney George Johnson declared the grand jury "was interested in the case only because of the possibility of murder."

The grand jury inquiry, it was declared, is a final effort to halt the escape of a clever murderer—if murder has been committed—a man or woman who has hidden the crime so adeptly, making it seem to be something else.

Along this line of reasoning, investigators were particularly concerned with a crimson clue brought to them by investigator Tom Cavett.

BLOOD OUTSIDE CAR

Cavett made another close inspection of the death car, Miss Todds phaeton, and found blood inside and outside.

This was the first time that point had been brought out.

Before police had found blood inside the car.

Miss Todd, they said, seated at the wheel of her car, started it, sat for a time to warm herself in the chill night with the heat of the running motor and then, becoming faint from the poisonous monoxide fumes, fell forward on the steering-wheel, bumping her nose and mouth and causing the hemorrhages noted when the body was found.

TRAIL OF BLOOD

"First, there was a blotch of crimson on the seat, beneath the steering wheel, eight inches inside the left hand front door, where Miss Todd's mouth was found resting in death.

Third, a crimson blotch three inches in diameter on the running board of the car.

If an analysis shows this blood does not contain carbon monoxide, the conclusion will be that the film star b led before she breathed deadly automobile fumes.

Among the notables summoned for the grand jury quiz were Roland West, close friend and business partner of Miss Todd; Pat Di Cicco, her handsome ex-husband; Margaret Lindsay, screen star; Jewel Carmen, wife of West; Mrs. Wallace Ford, and a score more.

By interrogating all who knew the actress and all who know anything about the circumstances leading up to her "garage death," the grand jury hopes to definitely write the answer to three questions:

Murder by monoxide?
Suicide by monoxide?
Accidental death by monoxide?

A coroner's jury has already found the death "probably accidental."

CURLEY Asks Saving HINTS

SEEKS TO END STATE TAX

Governor Curley has given state department heads until Monday to submit recommendations for new economies and suggestions for new sources of revenue for next year.

In conference with department heads, the Governor declared he would seek to abolish the $10,000,000 State tax levied on cities and towns and to provide for a $6,000,000 building program.

He pointed out that the State tax, which is levied almost entirely on real estate, must be placed by other forms of revenue if it is eliminated.

Cut in Tax Rate

"I am trying to devise means to avoid the State tax," he said. "No greater relief could be afforded home owners. It means about $2,000,000 annually and, if that were eliminated, it would mean a $1.80 reduction in the property tax rate.

"I am going to try so to arrange the administration of the Commonwealth by economies and new revenues that it will be possible to eliminate the State tax."

He declared his annual message to the Legislature New Year's Day would ask for elimination of the tax and also propose his $6,000,000 bond issue for a building program.

Aids Industries

The program, he said, would provide $4,000,000 for new mental diseases hospitals; another $1,000,000 for new penal institutions and the remaining $1,000,000 for a building to house state agencies now occupying leased quarters in Boston.

The governor also revealed he is considering the proposal of the special commission on taxation to eliminate the locally assessed tax on manufacturing machinery.

He said this would placate industries now operating and would tend to bring new ones into the state.

The governor also made known that the Commonwealth will finish the present year with a $1,000,000 cash surplus as a result of economies in administration.

MORE TODD LUCK

Lawrence Cousin in Hospital

The ill luck which put a tragic end to the career of blonde Thelma Todd of Lawrence and Hollywood is being shared today—though in smaller measure—by 19-year-old Edna Todd, the dead actress' first cousin.

Edna, who only recently entered Lawrence General Hospital as a student nurse, is now on the hospital rolls as a patient as well as an employe.

She's suffering from a severe knee strain received while playing basketball.

This will be the first year, too, which will not bring Edna a substantial present from her cousin, Thelma.

Although the latter sometimes did much of her Christmas shopping early, it was her habit to leave Edna's gift and a few others to be sent by airmail or fast express so that they would arrive not more than a day or two before the holiday.

"They called Thelma the 'Lucky Girl,'" she says. "I'm glad I'm 'unlucky,' by comparison."

Mexican Revolt Fails, Arms Seized

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Dec. 21—The Mexican government announced today that it learned a rebellion was scheduled to start in Orizaba, industrial center of the state of Vera Cruz, where the Laborista party has its greatest strength.

The movement already has been frustrated, the Department of Interior asserted, by seizure of arms and ammunition and arrest of six persons in raids here on a house of Luis Morones, labor leader and associate of General Plutarco Elias Calles.

Announcement of the proposed rebellion followed denials by both Morones and former President Calles, who returned here last week from Los Angeles, Cal., that they planned any revolutionary movement.

Where Thousands Gazed Last at Blonde Ex-Schoolma'am

Clad in blue silk pajamas, the body of blonde Thelma Todd of Hollywood—and Lawrence, Mass.—lies in this flower-decked casket. Before the bier passed thousands of mourners, including the film colony's great and near-great. The huge wreath, tagged "Alison," directly in front of the coffin, was sent by Roland West, Miss Todd's business associate and close friend. He once directed her in a picture in which, at his suggestion, she used the name, "Alison Lloyd." In the foreground is Thelma Todd's last portrait.

Floyd Gibbons Says:

JEWS, MOSLEMS NEAR OPEN WARFARE IN JERUSALEM

By FLOYD GIBBONS

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Jerusalem Dec. 21—The future of 350,000 Jews in Palestine and their public and private investments, totalling about $250,000,000, is vitally concerned in two conferences here today and tomorrow.

Nine thousand of these Jews carry American passports. Their interests in Palestine properties, industries, and banks represent millions of dollars.

Floyd Gibbons

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur Wauchope, British high commissioner in Palestine, meets seven of the most powerful Arab political leaders and explains to them what Britain will and will not offer in the way of a representative government for Palestine in pursuance of obligations under the League of Nations mandate.

On Sunday he meets seven Jewish leaders in religion, finance and politics, including Dr. Chaim Weizmann, head of world Zionists, and presents the same proposals to them, endeavoring to reconcile them with Jewish aspirations under Britain's promise of a national home for Jews in Palestine.

CONFLICT OF INTERESTS

A condition of tense excitement prevails throughout the country on the eve of these difficult negotiations.

The aims and aspirations of the Jews and Arabs are in direct conflict. The question is which are going to run the country. Antagonism is so embittered that extremist elements are quite prepared to resort to arms.

Both sides are secretly armed to the teeth. If the conferences fail the British fear widespread outbreaks and bloodletting that will make the Egyptian nationalist riots look like schoolboy mischief.

ARMS SMUGGLED IN

Millions of rounds of small-arm ammunition, together with cartridge drums for machine-guns and automatic rifles, have been smuggled into the country despite British efforts to keep them out.

These munitions are hidden in secret arsenals but oiled and loaded for action.

Jews are determined there shall be no repetition of the 1929 horrors when hundreds of their people were killed in street fighting with Arabs or murdered in their homes by fanatics who started house-to-house extermination.

Since 1923 the Jewish population of Palestine has jumped from 40,000 to today's estimated 350,000. This tremendous influx from other parts of the world is entirely different from the 40,000 old Palestine Jews who lived here in docile submission and spiritual reflection under the toleration of Moslems who occupied then, as now, Jewish sacred places of the Holy City.

NEWCOMERS READY TONIGHT

The newcomers, of young fighting stock are unwilling to turn the other cheek and accept conditions as Palestine co-religionists have in the past century.

Most of them have tasted liberty and equality in democratic countries of the West, and many, from strenuous service in armies of the World War, are more familiar with words of military commands than with the poetic phrases of the Talmud.

Moreover, they have new strength in the knowledge they have their combined financial, material and political support of 16,000,000 Jews throughout the world.

The 800,000 Arabs of Palestine are keenly conscious of the modern spirit replacing the former Jewish humility, and their fears are mounting daily that the Jews are making rapid strides to repossess the Holy Land and push Arab farmers and shepherds eastward into the barren buttes of wilderness and unfertile hills of the Moabites and Ammonites beyond the valley of the Dead Sea.

3 Big Apes Rampage On Campus

Baltimore, Dec. 21 (AP)—Three huge female chimpanzees escaped from their quarters at the Johns Hopkins Medical School today and spread havoc on the campus.

They first entered a classroom in the anatomy building by a window. Test tubes flew in all directions as the chimpanzees listened merrily to the tinkling of breaking glass.

One of the chattering trio was trying to find out what made an electric clock tick when a small posse of instructors descended upon the classroom. The chimpanzees slipped quietly out through the window as the instructors entered.

Another of the skylarking apes, accepting an apple extended as a gift, flung it violently at the giver. The third wrested a movie camera from the hands of a would-be photographer of her antics and buried it to the ground.

Finally, the havoc-making trio was coaxed back into the cage with food and the excitement ended.

Norwell Fire Laid to Wiring Defect

State Fire Inspector Edward Murtaugh today reported to State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity that in his opinion the $125,000 fire which partly destroyed the combination high school and town hall at Norwell was due to defective wiring.

Murtaugh is continuing his investigation. The possibility of the fire being caused by the heating plant has been eliminated.

CECILE EMILIE YVONNE

For once, it seems, old Santa Claus has slipped up, for this is most certainly not a five-quin sleigh which he has sent along as a pre-Christmas gift to the famous Dionne sisters. Marie and Annette together load it to capacity. Even with Yvonne volunteering to do the pulling, Cecile and Emilie are left out in the cold, awaiting their turn. Cold is one thing they're ready for, however, thanks to their brand new snow suits, bootees and visored caps. Cecile appears to be willing to travel on her own hands and knees, but Emilie looks quite ready to emit a yell of protest. Four Cars Crash; 2 Boys Dying

Two Wollaston youths are dying and three other persons, two of them girls, are being treated at Quincy City Hospital for injuries suffered in a quadruple auto crash in Quincy Shore drive early today.

On the danger list at the hospital and reported dying are Ralph Metzler, 18, of Bassell street, and George Orr, 18, of Berlin street, both of Wollaston.

The accident occurred when Metzler, driving toward Boston, crashed into the rear of the machine operated by Peters as the latter was making a left-hand turn, witnesses said.

Metzler's auto careened into another machine, operated by Arthur Cameron, Dale street, Roxbury, which was heading in the opposite direction, and overturned.

Driving behind Cameron was Raymond Saulnier of Rockland street, Houghs Neck. He swerved to avoid being involved, but was struck by Cameron's car, which was driven toward the side of the road.

FACTS IN POISONING

Clinch 'Mercy' Case in 5 Days

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Woonsocket, R. I., Dec. 21—Investigation of deaths of other patients of Nurse Marie Sevigny, accused slayer of Mrs. J. Valmore Normandin, stuttered to a halt here today.

Police officials, busy during the week investigating complaints of several [illegible] families, announced definitely they had ended their probe of these deaths.

Beginning today, it was said, police activity would be concentrated on preparation of evidence to be presented at the preliminary hearing to be granted the young woman in the Normandin case December 27.

Officials indicated today that they would probably present no more than three witnesses against the itinerant nurse at the hearing.

REQUIRE 5 DAYS

Their present efforts, contingent in large measure on the report of toxicologists examining Mrs. Normandin's organs, will necessarily be hampered for about five days.

From Providence today it was reported the toxicologists expressed the opinion it would take at least that period to complete their report.

They have been provided with samples of the embalming fluid used in Mrs. Normandin's body and other data from the undertaker.

Also with hospital charts describing the course of her treatment up to her death.

EXHUMATION OFF

Exhumation of the body of Mrs. Frank Lanciot, who died soon after Nurse Sevigny started attending her, was also abandoned by police.

Her husband, since the arrest of the young nurse, has sought persistently to have the manner of his wife's death determined definitely.

Pony for Girl Who Named 'Coniption'

New York, Dec. 21 (INS)—She gave the funny looking horse a name so she gets a real live Piebald pony.

That today was the situation regarding Spark Plug's queer looking running mate in Billy Decker's daily "Barney Google" strip. From now on it will be called "Conniption."

And 13-year-old Sarah Coleman of Lebanon, Pa., who suggested the queer name for the quest horse, will be given as a Christmas present a colorful pony from Hollywood, the last member of the movie dynasty headed by William S. Hart's famous pinto.

Miss Coleman's name, "Coniption," was selected from more than 100,000 names sent in by as many "Barney Google" followers in a nation-wide contest.

She explained that the winning inspiration came to her at a party at her home, when one of her young friends used the expression, "Don't go into a coniption."

She is fortunate in having a relative with a farm a few miles from her home, who, she says, will give the pony the best box stall and let her ride it daily.

Pope Blesses 95 Italian Mothers

Rome, Dec. 21 (AP)—Italy's 95 most prolific mothers, married within the past ten years and having 616 living children, were received today in audiences by Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius.

Il Duce gave money and prizes to the women, who turned over to him their wedding rings for Italy's gold reserve. Pope Pius blessed the women.

Another Cuban Reported Kidnaped

Havana, Dec. 21 (INS)—What is believed to be another Cuban kidnaping was reported today by the newspaper Diario De La Marina in a dispatch from Holguin.

The report stated a rich farmer, Ramon Tamayo, had "disappeared" with $19,000 which he was taking from the village of Puralo to purchase farm lands.

Jean Casto Hurt In Auto Crash

Miss Jean Casto, leading lady of "Three Men on a Horse," was knocked unconscious today when an automobile in which she was riding struck a girder of a railroad bridge in Cambridge. The accident occurred on Walden street.

The operator of the machine was Christopher D. Sykes of Linnaean street, Cambridge, who was also injured.

Both were treated at Cambridge City Hospital for contusions and scratches.

Miss Casto, despite her injuries, was still able to appear at the matinee of the show today. She said:

"I don't remember much about the crash.

"I suddenly saw a post or something sort of looming up in front, and that was all. The next thing I knew I was in the hospital.

Worcester Deb Engaged to Wed

Worcester, Dec. 21 (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Stoddard of Massachusetts avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Marion Stoddard, to Paris Fletcher of Fruit street, son of Mrs. John A. Fletcher of Middlebury, Vt.

Miss Stoddard attended the Bancroft School, and is a graduate of Miss Hall's School, Pittsfield, and Smith College. Mr. Fletcher is a graduate of Middlebury College and Harvard Law School.

4 Held, 5 Sought In Coast Kidnaping

Los Angeles, Dec. 21 (AP)—Four men charged with kidnaping a young housewife were held under $25,000 bond each today. Conviction may result in the death penalty.

Police are seeking five others, alleged to be members of a gang of nine who abducted, attacked and robbed Mrs. Gertrude Stark, Dec. 15.

Triple Trouble

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 21 (AP)—Karl Miller is a little doubtful about all this Christmas joy and goodwill.

Suddenly ill, he went to the doctor. When he was there the firemen called—his greenhouse had been wrecked by a boiler explosion.

The thermometer slid down to freezing—death for plants not damaged by the explosion. Then he got a bill for advertising his plants for Christmas presents.

SAVED IN SUBWAY

Her Foot Wedged, Crowd Screams

But for the shouts of subway passengers at the Milk street station today Mrs. Anna Lowden might have been seriously hurt with the starting of a train.

The 23-year-old Jamaica Plain woman's foot somehow slipped down between the car itself and the platform.

Silently she struggled to release herself, while crowds of Christmas shoppers shoved past her. Gradually the crowd dwindled, as the train was getting ready to start, and still her foot remained firmly lodged.

Suddenly a passenger noticed Mrs. Lowden's plight. She screamed. Others saw and added to the clamor.

A station starter signaled the trainman to wait and went to her assistance. Finally he managed to release her and sent her to Haymarket Relief Station.

Mrs. Lowden lives on Walden street, Jamaica Plain.

RED CCC DRIVE REVEALED BY M'CORMACK

Washington, Dec. 21 (UB)—An undercover campaign from Moscow to spread Communism through the Civilian Conservation Corps, which costs taxpayers of the nation millions of dollars each year, was revealed today.

The movement became known through correspondence between Rep. John W. McCormack (D) of Massachusetts, and Robert Fechner, director of the CCC.

Fechner frankly admitted in a letter to McCormack that Communist agitators are seeking to spread their propaganda through the CCC, but declared that "little headway" had been made.

TELL-TALE LETTER

McCormack had sent Fechner a letter containing copies of a speech in which Gil Green, Communist organizer, told the Third Internationale in a recent Moscow meeting of "tremendous headway" being made by Communists in the CCC.

"In a few communities, notably Connecticut and California, there have been repeated distributions of the usual Communistic mimeographed leaflets, but there is no evidence to indicate that enrollees in any Civilian Conservation Corps paid attention to these leaflets."

McCormack, however, declared he was ready to move in the next session of Congress for an investigation to determine just how far Communist activities have extended in the CCC.

PLAN FURTHER PROBE

McCormack was chairman of the special House committee which investigated un-American activities. This committee's life now has expired, and McCormack, Chairman Dickstein (D.) of the House Immigration committee and others will move to revive it.

Speaker Byrns of the House and Chairman John O'Connor of the House rules committee both have declared for a continuing investigation of Communist activities in this country.

Fechner is conducting a steady drive against Communist activities in the CCC, his letter to McCormack revealed. He added:

"I agree with you that we should be continually on guard to detect any subversive influences of this character in our civilian conservation corps camps and I feel confident that the camp commanders and all others in authority in the camps will be constantly alive to this situation."

Court Asked to Ban "Planned Town"

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—The District of Columbia Supreme Court was asked today to forbid Rexford Tugwell, the resettlement administrator, from establishing a $6,000,000 "planned community" in Franklin township, Somerset County, N. J. The suit, filed in the name of the township and four property owners, contended the project would transform the township from rural to urban character and greatly increase the cost of government without providing a corresponding increase in revenue since the community would be tax free.

Old Times

St. Paul, Dec. 21 (AP)—Don't have the hard winters we used to, eh? With the temperature 34 below in northern Minnesota and 16 below here, somebody dug up this newspaper clipping dated December 14, 1854:

"Children were playing in the lake shores barefooted and bareheaded, basking in the warm sunshine. It was comfortable driving over the prairies without coat or gloves."

JESUITS BARE REDS' DRIVE ON JOBLESS

By ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

Philadelphia, Dec. 20 — Earl Browder, secretary general of the Communist Party in this country and vice-president of the Communist International, is engaged in the ambitious task of enrolling 10,000,000 unemployed under the banners of Communism.

This is the assertion of Rev. Richard M. McKeon, S. J., dean of the St. Joseph's College anti-Communism school, who bases his statement on an article by Rev. Joseph F. Thorning, S. J., in the Jesuits' publication, "America."

Father McKeon pointed out that it was not Browder's expectation to enroll all unemployed in the Communist Party, but to enlist them in organizations over which Communists, openly or secretly, hold sway.

"According to Father Thorning," said Father McKeon, "Browder was assailed at the last convention of the Communist International at Moscow, in July of this year, for failing to interest more than 10 per cent of America's unemployed in Communist aims.

EUROPEAN METHODS

"A special conference of Communist leaders was held and the British, French and German delegates described to the others which they had found effective in their countries among the unemployed.

"Browder told them he believed all the unemployed in the United States could be enrolled in the so-called National Councils of the Unemployed.

"Father Thorning states: 'Shortly after Browder issued this statement in Moscow, the national organizer of the Unemployed Councils, Herbert Benjamin, led a delegation of the jobless from Baltimore to Washington, where they conferred with Harry Hopkins, director of Federal relief.

"'Apparently the former were given assurance that the needs of their delegation and the people they represented would be recorded a greater consideration, because they returned to Baltimore satisfied.'

"He shows that this illustrates the Communists' technique, in exploiting grievances and in striving to give the impression that they alone are successful in obtaining results for the needy.

GET RELIEF LISTS

"They ascertain the names and addresses of those on the relief rolls. Agitators then circulate among these families, promising special attention, prompt medical treatment, and so on. Those who respond to their appeals are placed at the head of relief lines, sometimes by violence.

"The relief families are continually told that the government owes them a living and that they should be receiving more relief than they are. Father Thorning says the power of these agitators was so great in Canada in one state their demands were agreed to by the relief authorities.

"There are more than 20,000 Communists on the relief rolls in New York city, according to this observer.

"The Communist chiefs are using taxpayers' money, distributed in the form of relief, to augment their own forces and to assist them in advancing toward their end—revolution."

Chanukah Fete Oserved by Jews

Greater Boston Jewry today continued the celebration of Chanukah, or the Feast of Lights. Candles are lighted, one for each of the eight days of the feast, until all eight are burning on the last day.

ALL-STAR ENTERTAINMENT IN BASKET FUND FINALE

Probably the most pretentious entertainment card ever prepared for a benefit in Boston has been arranged for the Christmas Basket Fund show tomorrow night in the brilliant Cascades at the Hotel Bradford.

Singers, dancers, comedians—in fact every act in town that has merit and that will be available on Sunday night—will take part in the long bill in charity's name.

In addition, an entire special trainload of colored performers from New York, combed from the hot spots of the Harlem fun belt, will come over to Boston especially for this one show and the aiding of Greater Boston's needy on Christmas Day.

Not a performer is there in the

TOMMY MAREN
Master of Ceremonies

long list who did not offer his or her services gladly toward the brightening of otherwise dreary homes next Wednesday—and tomorrow night's show will go far toward aiding the cause.

Every Cent Helps

Every cent derived from the performance will be appreciated, however, for this year the need is great and the appeals are overwhelming.

So long is tomorrow night's entertainment bill, prepared by Maestro Tommy Maren, that the first act will take the floor at 8 o'clock. In order to complete the show by midnight and allow two hours for general dancing.

Of course the entire Cascades floor show, Tommy Maren's "Harlem Follies Bergere," with the fast-stepping Cascades line "Twelve Dark Clouds of Joy," and Snappy Wallace, eccentric dancer, will take part.

Up to today, Tommy Maren had lined up the following acts, also:

Georgia Dawey Washington, international star of stage and radio, who was starred in "Strike Me Pink" and other Broadway productions; Carl Moore and Billy Payne, beautiful Catherine Rand, Alice Harris, Dot and Edith, Horace Payne, "Two Jockeys and a Tout," Hattie Noles, Dotson, "Three Flashy Steppers."

Adrian O'Brien, Alice O'Leary, Ray Fontaine, "Five Kewpie Dolls," Burns, Baker and Burns, Joe Donovan, Benny McLaughlin, the "Lucky Girls," the Corbett line—and, as an extra feature, the comical Benny Drohan.

There probably will be other acts added to this stellar card, also, and Joe Neville and his dance band will play throughout the evening.

Maren on Hand

Tommy Maren himself will be master of ceremonies, insuring that the long card will be run off with snap and celerity, leaving no chance for a drag or a dull moment.

From the proceeds of the big show the Boston Evening Ameri-

-can and Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund will receive the largest percentage, making it possible to feed many hundred more needy Greater Boston families on Christmas Day.

L. Walter Osterstock, resident manager of the Hotel Bradford, is co-operating in every way and has promised to turn out one of the finest dinners ever served at an affair of this kind.

Persons who attend the show at the Cascades may park their automobiles free during the performance, in the parking space of Tremont-Broadway Garage, Inc., at 155 Broadway, between Tremont street and Shawmut avenue.

Through courtesy of the management your car will be parked free merely by telling the attendant that you are going to the Christmas Basket Fund show.

This is the final benefit show of the year for the 23d annual Christmas Basket Fund, but it is not finale for the Fund drive itself.

Three days more remain for your contributions in aid of Greater Boston's needy, but unless there is a continued generous and warm-hearted response right up to Christmas Eve there will be many tearful homes on Christmas Day.

For most of us, who have been more fortunate, or more lucky, or something, it will be a happy day, but there are hundreds of appeals being received daily—pitiful appeals which ask for just one full-some meal.

It is evident that the need is greater this year than ever before—and the time is so short in which to get together a sum sufficient to alleviate the distress entirely.

If you would make your own Christmas happier in the knowledge that you have brought at least one day of cheer to a discouraged mother or father, and at least one day of laughter to ragged children—GIVE NOW TO THE BASKET FUND.

Joy—or Gloom

No contribution can be too small to be welcome. Any contribution, any size, large or small, will be gratefully accepted. Your pennies, nickels or dimes, collectively, may mean the difference between joyousness and gloom in many a household when Christmas dawns.

Send ANYTHING to Basket Fund headquarters at 294 Devonshire street, or to the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser offices at 5 Winthrop square.

If any individual contributor to the Basket Fund wishes to feel, on Christmas Day, that they are providing the Christmas Dinner for a WHOLE FAMILY—a $5 contribution will do the business. The contents of a WHOLE BASKET, filled and delivered Christmas Eve, follows:

One peck of potatoes.
One pound of coffee.
One can of peas.
Two pounds of sugar.
One jar of preserves.
One dozen oranges.
One loaf of white bread.
One can of corn.
Half pound of mixed tea.
One pound cake.
Two pounds of onions.
and, of course, that TURKEY.

There are many in Greater Boston who realize what a Christmas Basket can mean, and they have pitched in with all they have to further the good work.

She'll Be Looking for You

Here's another talented young lady who will help to make your evening a pleasurable one at the Cascades, atop the Hotel Bradford, next Sunday night. This star, Nell Kelly, and hundreds of others are donating their services for the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund.

BRIDAL HOME FORLORN

Couple Shun Honeymoon House

Scituate, Dec. 21—Honeymoon House in Tilden road is empty and forlorn.

Mrs. Lydia Stearns Gardner, the bride of a year ago, has divorced her husband, Robert, on grounds of cruelty.

And all this makes the residents of this town sad because the "ideal marriage" in Honeymoon House is at an end.

The house was not finished until September 30, 1934, and everyone pointed to it with pride. It was a civic asset, planned and built by Gardner.

On September 30, 1935, however, Mrs. Gardner filed suit for divorce. She was granted a decree on December 3.

Gardner is in Panama on a job there, and is said to have declared that he would never occupy the house again inasmuch as it is in Mrs. Gardner's name.

Mrs. Gardner, at the home of her parents, said she might go back to Honeymoon House sometime, but she was not sure.

BASKET APPLICATIONS MUST BE APPROVED

In order that Christmas Baskets may go only to deserving and needy families, each application must be approved by a pric-t, a minister, a rabbi or charitable organization. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get the signature of one of these persons.

Address all names and lists, as well as contributions, to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

PUSH LIGHTSHIP CRASH PROBE

Officials today began an investigation to determine the cause of the crash of a British freighter into the Boston Lightship.

At the same time, representatives of the steamship line operating the freighter, Seven Seas Spray, were making efforts to obtain a bond to free the vessel so that its trip to Spain could be resumed.

The bond is necessary to guarantee the Federal government that its $20,000 suit against the ship's captain and owners will be heeded.

Just barely afloat, the Lightship was towed to a Quincy dry dock for repairs. A jagged hole, extending from the rail to a point five feet below the waterline was caused when the prow of the freighter crashed the ship.

Meanwhile, repairs to the bow of the Seven Seas Spray were nearing completion at the Atlantic Works, East Boston, and it was expected that the freighter would resume its voyage late today.

Deeds of heroism by Captain Ernest L. Snow, master of the lightship, and his crew of seven, augmented by two men from the pilot boat Pilot, saved the veteran sentinel from sinking immediately after the collision.

2 Gunmen Rob Brighton Man

Stephen Urbon, 50, of Gardenia street, Brighton, was sad today. He was robbed of $57 by two gunmen in Cambridge while en route to do his Christmas shopping. Police are searching for the robbers.

Santa On War Tank

Berlin, Dec. 21 (AP)—Woden, the old German God of War, rather than the Prince of Peace, dominated Germany's strangest yuletide celebration last night.

The German tank corps in Wuensdorf observed Christmas in a new "heroic" form.

After dinner, the barracks' door were flung open and a motor cycle squad roared out. The cycles were ridden by "angels" in white robes and wings—but wearing steel helmets.

Then Santa Claus, in full, traditional costume, arrived, mounted on a tank between the barrels of two machine guns.

SAD CHRISTMAS FOR BRUNO

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 21 (INS)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's death-house Christmas will be a cheerless one, it was revealed today.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper at the New Jersey State prison, announced that no one would be permitted to visit the condemned slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

Last Christmas Hauptmann was in jail in Flemington awaiting the start of his trial and had turkey.

This year his death house fare will consist of pork, soup, mashed potatoes, apple sauce, celery, mince pie and coffee.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Schools and Hot Stoves Cause Cold Shivers

Sage Even Has Eye on Watchmen Who Need Some Watching

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"That smells very nice, indeed, Snuffy," says The Senator.

"You are setting a good example."

THE SENATOR

Snuffy the Cabman is an old friend of The Senator because Snuffy the Cabman has ferried The Senator home with his horse and hack in many a storm.

"Senator," says Timmy, doing the honors, "I see where Dr. Washburn, the institutions commissioner, is competing with Italy in the scrap iron bids."

"How is that, Timmy?" asks The Senator.

"Why," says Timmy, "first he buys those 100-year-old iron beds you can toss out the windows without they break, and now he has bought a second-hand stove for $112, including repairs, to heat Long Island."

"Be that as it may," says The Senator, "there is one thing you can say about Doc Washburn. While some of the boys are stealing a hot stove he insists on paying for a cold one."

The Senator says he is pleased with his own bon mott and is shaking all over, but suddenly he has stopped shaking and it is easy to see he has got an idea, because he says to Timmy:

"Timmy, I have got an idea. Give me a pencil and paper and we will have a little fun with somebody I know."

So Timmy gives The Senator the I. O. U. pencil and paper and this is what The Senator writes:

"You are in the middle in the school affair.

Meet me at once at Timmy's—The Senator."

Then the Senator says this to Snuffy the Cabman, who has just inhaled the last of his hot buttered:

Whip Up Old Betsy!

"Snuffy, here is a little note for a friend of mine. Whip up old Betsy to this address on School street. Maybe you will find somebody in this room. If you do, give him the note. If not, stick it under the door."

When Snuffy the Cabman has gone The Senator says it is too bad he has not thought of this idea before because his friend has probably gone home, but anyway it will be a good joke when his friend finds the note in the morning.

"Speaking of hot stoves," says The Senator, addressing all the boys and his hot buttered at the same time, "now that District Attorney Bill has his mad up in this affair a lot of secrets are due to be made public.

"For instance, the public may learn the identity of a school department official who saved the job of the vandalous, scandalous school watchman. This is a very funny story because the watchman is hired to guard the school against vandals, and one Sunday morning the janitor arrives to tend the fires and discovers much wreckage scattered all around, including the vandalous, scandalous school watchman and three friends who are sleeping under the desks. They did not discharge the watchman, in fact, they did not even keep him after school . . . Just a little dash of nutmeg more, Timmy."

"This watchman," says Timmy, "is not the same watchman who keeps a cot, a bathrobe, a pair of pajamas and a pair of bedroom slippers in the school where he is watching?"

"No," says The Senator, "that is another watchman with other connections, and another schoolhouse, but the idea is the same. When the public gets this whole picture they will understand what Mayor Freddie means when he says it would be cheaper to insure the schools against vandals than to maintain the watchmen. Personally, I am for hiring the vandals to guard the school buildings.

No One Envies Job

"When District Attorney Bill and the grand jury finish with the big work, it will not surprise me to see the Fin Com step in and clip off the fringes, although I met E. Mark Sullivan today and he said it was hands off for him unless he had word from the boss. As a matter of fact, I have not encountered anybody who is envious of District Attorney Bill's job.

"Among those who are demanding that the school committee resign in a body are some of the 25 unsuccessful candidates for jobs on the committee who figure a special election would be held.

"Clem Norton tells me the reputed slush fund for the election was $25,000 and that teachers in certain of the high schools were solicited for $5 apiece . . . Another of the same all around, Timmy.

"A little bird tells me that one of the school committee members banged very loudly on a desk up at District Attorney Bill's and accused others of putting him on a spot when it was he who really started the investigation. He said he was very much put out with the others."

Well, it is just as this moment when everybody has forgotten Snuffy the Cabman and his errand that we hear a tremendous clatter and rumble out in the street. All the boys rush to the windows to have a look out to see what is making all this noise and there comes Snuffy the Cabman heading for Timmy's.

Snuffy the Cabman is leaning over giving Old Betsy the butt of the whip. The sparks are flying like on Paul Revere's ride.

There are two guys crowded into the top seat with Timmy, a half dozen bulging the inside of the back and four hanging from the top.

"Whoa!" yells Snuffy the Cabman.

EXCLUSIVE

EDITH MAXWELL'S OWN STORY

Edith Maxwell's pleasant childhood was marred by but one unhappy memory—when her big brother, Earl, left home. She tells why Earl turned his back on the Cumberlands in this, the seventh instalment of her life story, appearing exclusively in the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

By Edith Maxwell

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I have written that my childhood at Jenkins was crammed with happy memories. That is true. But there was one incident in all that time which looms black against the bright record of gay, carefree years.

My brother, Earl, left home after a fight with my father.

I don't remember what it all started about. But I do remember a frightful row.

And a few days later Earl packed all his things—there weren't many—into a shabby little bag, kissed my mother and sisters goodby and set out for Chicago to make his own way in the world.

"Take good care of the kids, Edith." Earl told me as he kissed me goodbye.

And I couldn't answer him because I was crying so hard.

My mother just stood there dry-eyed with her work-worn hands folded before her. She went to the window and waved to Earl briefly as he passed out of sight over the knoll that sloped down into town. Then when she knew he was gone for good she retired to her bedroom and wept quietly.

Pretty soon, my then youngest sister, Anna Ruth, and I, were in there crying with her. Mary Catherine wasn't born yet.

Little Time to Cry

But a mountain woman many times doesn't even have a chance to take time out for a good cry. We had only been in her room a few minutes carrying on like that over Earl's going away, when we smelled something burning in the kitchen.

Mother, dabbing at her eyes rushed out to the hot stove. There was some corn bread in the oven. And it was scorching. Mother had to forget the tears which were coursing down her cheeks. She grabbed up a towel and rescued the bread from the smoking oven.

I will never forget the pitiful sight mother presented bending over the kitchen stove, the tears running down her face. She couldn't very well wipe them away. And they just dripped down on the stove, each drop making a little hissing noise as it hit the hot surface.

Mother felt so badly, I suppose, because Earl is her only son, he is the only boy in our family of six. And to have him leave home when he was so young nearly broke her heart.

"Don't you mind, Mommy," I tried to comfort her. "Earl will write to us every day. And I'm sure he'll come home to see us often."

Thoughts Buried

The sound of my own voice comforted me somewhat. And after awhile we all stopped crying, our thoughts buried under the dull, heavy monotonous routine of life in a mountain village.

But all that day I strove to console myself by picturing Earl as the hero in a sort of real life moving picture drama—the kind that always has a happy, glamorous ending.

Little did I dream at that time the tragic circumstances under which we would find Earl in our midst once more after many years. That part of it all seems like a nightmare. There is just no accounting for what Fate keeps in store for us.

My father, never an extremely talkative man—though he was always a hard worker and a good provider—lapsed into even more lengthy periods of silence after Earl left home.

Sometimes days would pass on end without his uttering scarcely a word. He would just come home to sleep and eat. He was not the kind of a man who enjoyed spending a happy evening with his family by the fireside.

Earl never told me until years later what had happened the day of the fight. Father, it seems, had come home drunk the night before and called Earl bad names and tried to whip him. Earl said he told Poppy at the time to leave him alone when he was drunk.

Poppy Floored

And when Poppy wouldn't Earl tried to protect himself, and finally knocked Poppy to the floor.

The fight continued the next morning when my father got up. Then he whipped Earl and whipped him and whipped him. Earl didn't utter a sound or a cry, nor did he try to resist his father then. But after it was all over he decided he wasn't going to stay around and get mixed up in any more unpleasantness like that.

We gradually forgot the incident to some extent. Time has a way of blotting out the unpleasant memories in life. A child, I have discovered, can grow up to forget the unreasonableness of a harsh or overly strict parent by making an effort to understand him.

Life in Jenkins went on in nearly the same manner. I continued going to the movies, being a "tomboy," and indulging in my favorite pastime—fishing. The winter before Earl left I had been initiated to the sport of ice skating. And in real cold weather I used to be able to skate down the river, which was near our home, right into the middle of town.

Many, many times I remember skating off to the movies in the evening and then back home again. It was beautiful in the Jenkins valley on crisp, cold moonlight nights. In later years, in the winter time, I have often caught myself longing to be able to skate that distance, from the middle of town back home, once again.

But meanwhile, during the few years we spent in Jenkins, many improvements had come to the mountains. Many new houses had gone up in the town since I was six years old. A dam had been built in the river and there was a power plant there which supplied the town with electricity.

The state had converted the rocky old wagon road into an excellent hard surfaced thoroughfare. They had ironed out some of the steep spots and "wrinkles" in the winding old trail. And every day, it seemed, there were more and more automobiles traveling over that highway.

'The Pound' Booms

Prosperity was nosing its way into the Cumberlands.

Even "The Pound" was booming. One of the most well-equipped hardware stores in Wise County had been established there. A Piggly-Wiggly grocery chain store had opened up. So had a drug store.

A new road had been built leading from "The Pound" to Clintwood, several miles distant in Dickerson County, Virginia. Traffic increased by leaps and bounds.

I heard discussion at home about the possibility of our moving back to "The Pound." My father owned a piece of land there almost in the center of town. He was planning to erect a building there and move the family in part of it, with the hope of renting out a portion to prospective merchants.

Contemplation of the change intrigued me all that winter. I was in the seventh grade in the Jenkins School at that time. And I was about ready for a change of scenery and environment. My memories of Pound were fascinating. I was eager to get back there to resume acquaintance with my many cousins and relatives whom we were able to visit only occasionally while living in Jenkins.

We moved back to "The Pound" in the spring, just after I had finished the seventh grade.

Unscathed As Car Rolls Down Bank

Worcester, Dec. 21—Philip C. Pierce, of the Canal Zone, must carry a Panama rabbit's foot, if there is such a thing.

He fell asleep at the wheel while driving along the southwest cutoff near here. When he woke he saw a long row of concrete posts rushing toward him.

Unable to swerve in time, he crashed his car through seven of the posts. The car then turned over and rolled halfway down a 50-foot embankment.

Pierce climbed out through the side door, which was directly over his head.

Three Certified For Fire Captain

For promotion to captain in the Newton fire department, the state civil service commission today certified three names to local authorities.

Those three, eligible in the order named, are Daniel J. Herlihy, Newtonville; Bernard F. Neville, West Newton; Thomas W. Eneges, Newton. Three names were also submitted for promotion to lieutenant: Everett H. Siebart, Newton Highlands; John L. Marchant, Auburndale and John L. Martin, Newton.

15 SHIPS BRING HUGE CARGOES

With a fleet of 15 foreign and coastwise ships arriving here today and over the week-end to land thousands of tons of general cargo, Boston longshoremen were certain today of plenty of Christmas money.

The fleet, which includes two passenger liners, Samaria and S. S. Exeter, expected to arrive Monday and Tuesday, will dock at East Boston, Army Base, Mystic Docks and Commonwealth Pier.

Longshoremen were today discharging cargo from the S. S. Svanhild, which arrived at Mystic Docks from Scandinavian ports with 1000 tons of general carwgo. The S. S. Lucia from Mediterranean ports docked at the Army Base with hundreds of tons of cargo. The S. S. Winona County from Liverpool docked at Hoosac Docks with several hundred tons of cargo.

Serge Rachmaninoff Symphony Soloist

By RUTH MARSTERS

The appearance of Serge Rachmaninoff as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday afternoon in a program devoted to his works, marks one of the notable music events of the season.

The great composer-pianist's performance with the orchestra of his Third Piano Concerto in D minor on this occasion was his first at these concerts after an absence of ten years.

Symphony Hall was filled to exacity and the audience evidenced a high enthusiasm throughout.

Dr. Koussevitzky opened the program with Rachmaninoff's Second Symphony in D minor, which aside from enjoying a wide popularity, is the composer's favorite among his own works.

In its inimitable performance by the orchestra under Dr. Koussevitzky's superbly luminous reading it must have attained a new significance for many.

The Second Symphony and Third Concerto, written within a year of each other (1908-1909), have many inner characteristics in common.

This does not in any way infer repetition or monotony but on the contrary that both are rich in melodic content of a brooding, melancholy vein—that the general contours of the climaxes are similar.

Rachmaninoff's performance of the concerto as soloist was incomparable. In it all the withdraws magnificence, the often incredible beauty of the work were revealed.

The program will be repeated this evening.

G-MEN ESCORT MILNE HOME

Woodstock, N. Y., Dec. 21 (AP)—Caleb Milne, 4th, returned today to his mother's home in Woodstock.

Pale and limping, young Milne was helped out of an automobile by G-men who accompanied him on an automobile trip home from the hospital in Doylestown, Pa. He showed visibly the effects of his days in the hands of supposed kidnapers.

Mrs. Frederica Milne, his mother, and his two brothers, Frederic, 18, and Aubrey, 15, came home with him.

A neighbor, Mrs. Marion Bullard, met the party. She said Caleb felt ill, and she went to a neighbor's house for whiskey.

10 More Judges Urged

An increase in the number of Superior Court judges from 21 to 41 is proposed in a bill filed today at the State House by Representative James J. Kiley of Charlestown.

RAFAEL SABATINI'S GLORIOUS ROMANCE BECOMES YOUR MAGIC CARPET OF ADVENTURE!

Year after year this amazing novel has held its place as the red-blooded favorite of a world of readers. Today it takes its place as the romantic screen's classic of classics!

By actual count, a million dollars worth of adventure packed by Warner Bros. into one great motion picture that wrings every sensation, every thrill, from the story of the glorious rogue whose name was the terror of kings.

He thought he had faced every peril a man could know—until the beauty he had scorned actually bought him as her slave!

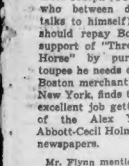
COMEDY Sets New Mark For Stage Hits

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Today's best laugh comes in the form of a communique from Joseph (Cue-ball) Flynn, who between debating (he talks to himself) whether he should repay Boston for its support of "Three Men On a Horse" by purchasing the toupee he needs direly from a Boston merchant or buy it in New York, finds time to do an excellent job getting the title of the Alex Yokel-George Abbott-Cecil Holm farce in the newspapers.

Mr. Flynn mentions that Monday will institute the eighth (8th) week of his show's Boston run.

"As 'Three Men On a Horse' swings into its eighth week at the Plymouth Theater," writes Mr. Flynn, "it looks as if the local stage has become run-minded again, as it was in the gay twenties. The present engagement of 'Three Men on a Horse' is the longest here by any Broadway show since 1929."



George Holland

Mr. Flynn then proceeds: "Three Men On a Horse' is the funniest show of this decade: its cast is perfect plus; all existing records will probably go by the boards before it departs Boston; Hume Cronyn is better as Erwin than any actor alive would be in the role; the show will popularize the alphabet again by playing at least 26 weeks in this territory, but"—and here comes the punch line—"the publicity department (Ed. note: Mr. Flynn) is not shouting yet."

From which this corner deduces that Mr. Flynn whispers as quietly as a sea-lion barks.

Boston theater-managers and the staffs of the drama departments of the newspapers were saddened today by news from New York that Charlie McClintock, for 20 years one of the most popular press-agents on Broadway, died Thursday night.

For years, Charlie accompanied his Boston friends when they made a retreat at a Brighton monastery. He became a Catholic an hour before he died. This first notice of his kind in this column is concluded by the explanation that Charlie McClintock, a grand guy, rated a biography, not an obituary.

"Journey to Mars" to Be Made as Color Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 21—Spectacular, exciting and weird is the promised "Journey to Mars" to be made in color as a 1936 Paramount production. John Colton and James Ashmore Creelman are now writing the story which tells of the explorations to the planets by people of the earth.

We have a number of pictures and plays dealing with imaginary trips to mars but with the experiments in the stratosphere, "journey to mars" will probably have a different angle.

W. H. Christie of Mount Wilson, will be the scientific collaborator with Colton and Creelman and Arthur Hornblow, Jr. will produce this imaginative yarn for which special stages will be built and scientific instruments will be used.

I have never seen any one more crushed than Walter Wanger after "In Person" by Samuel Hopkins Adams, was previewed. The idea is so similar to Faith Baldwin's "The Moon's Our Home" that Walter was unhappy. But he had already purchased Miss Baldwin's novel which appeared in Cosmopolitan serially and which has been widely read all over the country. So now he is going to give "The Moon's Our Home" such original treatment that the similarity in plot won't be noticed. Walter has already borrowed Margaret Sullavan from Universal, and she will be starred with Henry Fonda as her leading man and Roland Young in a featured part. Roland hasn't been in Hollywood for ages and he will be glad to see him.

"Splendor" may not have won as much approval from the critics as some of Samuel Goldwyn's other pictures but it hasn't made him lose faith in Rachel Crothers. She has written "The Perfectly Good Woman" for him and will prepare it for the screen on the same personage basis. Miriam Hopkins, Billie Burke and David Niven have already been chosen for the Crothers picture.

Chatter in Hollywood: Margaret Lindsay is doing her best not to be interviewed by reporters since her engagement was announced to Pat DeCicco, former husband of Thelma Todd. She is with Janet Gaynor and is keeping out of sight until all the excitement over the Thelma Todd mystery has subsided. Margaret happened to be out with De Cicco on the Saturday night when Miss Todd made her last social appearance, and naturally her friendship for De Cicco is of interest.

Robert Fairbanks took a long trip to Europe to consult his brother, Douglas, before he accepted the position as studio manager for 20th Century-Fox. Naturally, since United Artists and 20th Century-Fox have not been on the most intimate terms he felt that he must consult Doug before he took a job with Darryl Zanuck. Doug advised him to take the job and now reports are current that Fairbanks, Sr., may withdraw from United Artists since he will undoubtedly continue to live in Europe.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Best Cagney Role

James Cagney, portrayer of hard-boiled screen characters, has the best role of his career in "Frisco Kid," new Warner Brothers picture which opened at the Scollay yesterday.

As the "Frisco Kid," Cagney is seen as an adventurer on the Barbary Coast of old San Francisco during the blood and thunder gold rush days. Such a characterization, of course, is right up the manly red-head's alley, affording him plenty of opportunity for fighting. Ricardo Cortez also gives a fine performance in this film, in the role of a famous underworld gambler.

Shirley at Best

'The Littlest Rebel' Child Star's Top Film

By MARION FRENCH

Shirley Temple, little dimpled darling of the screen, appears at the Metropolitan Theater this week in "The Littlest Rebel." As usual this exceptionally bright child actress doesn't disappoint in this, probably her best performance to date.

"The setting of "The Littlest Rebel" is laid on an old Southern plantation during Civil War days. In the earlier sequences Miss Temple is seen as Virgie Cary, a happy carefree little daughter of well to do parents. Later, she goes through many harrowing experiences when her beloved daddy is away to war and the family becomes impoverished. But little Shirley Temple little Shirley takes these extremely variant characterizations all in her stride. She dances and sings gaily with the colored slaves with great naturalness as the picture opens and realistically weeps with them as the family's fortunes change.

Bill Robinson gives a marvelous performance as Uncle Billy, Shirley's personal slave. His acting is improving so it almost surpasses his tap-dancing, which to date hasn't been topped by anyone. Here he portrays a character whose fidelity to his Southern owners exceeds any personal feelings he has concerning the Northerners who are attempting to set him free.

Uncle Billy as done by Robinson will be a film character long remembered by movie audiences. His sweet and tender care of little Virgie when her father is under sentence of death after the death of her mother is one of the most touching things ever seen in a picture.

Of course there are plenty of tears shed by viewers of "The Littlest Rebel," but there are many laughs to be had as well. There's one terribly funny scene where Shirley puts lamp-black on her face to fool the Northern soldiers into believing she is a little colored girl.

Bill Robinson and Shirley do three intricate tap routines during the film. All are very entertaining, but the one they do as street entertainers to get money to help Virgie's father is the cutest of all. It's an old-time Negro shuffle effect and little Miss Temple in her adorable old-fashioned costume, including pantalettes, is most endearing in this number.

John [illegible], as Captain Cary, Virgie's father, gives his usual good performance, and Karen Morley is sweet and appealing as Mrs. Cary. The rest of the supporting cast are excellent. Jack Holt plays the part of Colonel Morrison, a Northerner who falls for Virgie's charms and tries to help the Cary family, with great charm and forcefulness.

"Santas on Parade," the stage attraction, is a highly entertaining affair. There are dancing elephants, a champion paper-tearer, acrobats and plenty of skilful dancers. In fact the chocolest show-goer can't complain about this bill. And it's especially appropriate for the holiday season; Shirley Temple looks like she had fallen off of a Christmas Tree and "Santas on Parade" can't be beaten as a seasonal revue.

Uptown Bill

Margaret Sullivan's latest film vehicle, "So Red the Rose" comes to the Uptown Theater today. Adapted from Stark Young's novel of Civil War days, the screen version is a touching dramatization of a lovely Southern girl's tragic romance. Walter Connolly, Randolph Scott, Janet Beecher and Dickie Moore lend excellent support to Miss Sullivan's interpretation of her role. Will Rogers' last picture, "In Old Kentucky," is also shown on the same program.

Gala Stage Shows for Boston

By HARRIS MORGAN

A most impressing group of stage presentations have been planned for the Keith-Boston Theater, beginning Christmas Day.

Charles W. Koerner, division manager of the RKO theaters, announces the signing of many famous stars of screen, stage and radio for immediate future appearances. A brilliant array of these stars will be seen in elaborate editions of recent Broadway musical successes and noted night club revues.

Heading the list are the following: Everett Marshall, romantic baritone star of the Ziegfeld "Follies" and George White's "Scandals"; Mary Small, popular little singing star of coast to coast radio network programs; Jane Froman, beautiful songstress of the air, lately featured in the "Ziegfeld Follies"; Frank Fay, one of Broadway's smartest comedians, and Ken Murray, idol of both screen and stage.

In addition, Fats Waller will appear with a top-notch revue of 100 sepia entertainers, Toby Wing, considered one of Hollywood's loveliest starlets, will be seen in person; Wayne King and his famous Radio Waltz Orchestra, Joe Morrison, known best for his rendition of the "Last Round-Up"; Connie's Inn Revue with a large cast of Harlem hotcha performers and the newly imported Folies Parisienne, direct from the French Casino in New York, are among the rest of the brilliant attractions to be offered to the Keith-Boston's patrons this winter.

Open House at Many Homes Christmas Eve

By BETTY ALDEN

IN KEEPING with their annual custom Beacon Hill-Billies will throw out the latch strings of their cabins on Christmas Eve and have candles burning in the windows to bid their friends stop for a cup of cheer . . . During the past few years the custom of having open house has been overdone and taken advantage of in so many cases that hostesses have reduced their invitation lists to a minimum, but good cheer will prevail among the smaller groups just the same . . .

MRS. GERALD CASSEDY

Friends will gather about the punch table of the Robert Cushmans . . . and while carols echo through the streets below, there will be gatherings in the homes of the Horace Morisons . . . the Alfred P. Lowells on Mt. Vernon street . . . and Mr. Walter H. Kilham and his family will share eggnog with a few friends . . .

Distance means little to the Alden Megrews (Rue French), who are flying home from Appleton, Wisconsin to spend the holidays with their families, the George Megrews and Mr. and Mrs. Hollis French . . . Alden and Rue will arrive Christmas Eve in time to make a few visits around the Hill with friends they haven't seen since their marriage in the summer . . .

Another bridal couple who will have a week or so renewing friendships around Boston are the Gerald Cassedys (Eleanor Rowe) who surprised everyone by getting married in New York several weeks ago . . . They are coming over the road from New York to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Prescott Rowe, the bride's parents . . .

Christmas means a hop across the Atlantic for Mr. Boylston Beal who has arrived from London with a trunkful of toys for his twin grandsons, children of Mr. and Mrs. Lester de C. Hinds (Elizabeth Beal) of Beacon street . . .

Santa Claus will have to fly to Washington to find the stockings of the three little children of Mr. and Mrs. Guido Perera for the whole family will be there celebrating with grandfather and grandmother Ze Barney T. Phillips, parents of Mrs. Perera . . .

Other Bostonians who have headed South for holiday are Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield who have opened their home at Boca Grande, Florida and who are entertaining Mrs. George Richmond Fearing . . .

Copley Society to Entertain

THE ANNUAL CUSTOM of the Copley Society to hold open house on New Year's Day will be observed on January 1 from four to seven at the society's home on Commonwealth avenue . . .

President Thomas G. Frothingham and the board of governors will receive the guests . . . and the hostesses for the occasion are to be Mrs. Cyrus E. Dallin, Mrs. Frederick L. Emerson, Mrs. Thomas G. Frothingham, Miss Grace Nichols, Mrs. Calvin G. Page and Miss Mary Evangeline Walker . . .

In pleasing contrast to former receptions, Mrs. Frederick H. Briggs and the entertainment committee have arranged for music and informal dancing for the guests . . . and for special diversion the tango will be danced by Miss Virginia Stanley and Mr. Arthur Petrie . . .

Priscilla Bartol Is Milton Bride

WITHOUT BENEFIT of bridal attendants, Miss Priscilla Bartol and Frederick R. Grace were married at high noon today in the First Parish Church in Milton . . . A very distinguished congregation of friends and relatives of both families attended the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Vivian T. Pomeroy, rector of the church . . . and Dr. John Bartol gave his daughter away . . .

Dances, Teas and Dinners On Vacation Schedule

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

VACATION DAYS are here for Boston's college set, a whirl of dances, teas and dinners, having been planned in their honor.

Mary Everett, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Everett of Watertown, is holding a tea next Saturday in honor of Mary Elizabeth O'Hare of Jamaica Plain and Alice Jantzen of Brookline.

Mary O'Hare, whose parents are Dr. and Mrs. James P. O'Hare, has been studying at Trinity College, Washington, D. C. Alice Jantzen, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Francis T. Jantzen of Brookline, is a member of the freshman class at Wellesley College. Alice was also guest today at the presentation tea of Martha Parkhurst of Providence, R. I., at the Rhode Island Country Club.

Eleanor Barry of Jamaica Plain is entertaining a group of her friends at dinner Wednesday evening before going on to the alumnae dance of Trinity College at the Hotel Somerset. Eleanor received her degree from Emmanuel College last June and has recently been elected to the Ace of Clubs.

Gretchen Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Coleman of Belmont, has returned from National Girl's Seminary in Washington to spend the holidays with her parents.

Mary Clarissa McCarthy of Brookline is directing the dance. Among those serving as patrons are: Governor James M. Curley, Dr. Joseph Stanton, Mr. Joseph Mealey, Dr. Henry McPeake, Mrs. T. P. Rowe, Mrs. R. J. Marrow, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. McCarthy, Mrs. M. J. Lyons, Mrs. A. J. Meserve, Mrs. J. A. Murphy, Mrs. Edmund L. Grimes, Mrs. James Quarte.

Flowers of Rain Cologne

By ARLINE GOULD

OUR IDEA of a completely satisfactory gift for anyone whom you happen to be devotedly fond of, is a bottle of fragrant cologne—dew-fresh and pungent as flowers after a spring rain.

In the good old days when such places as Maxim's and Rector's were names to conjure with, cologne was something you used to take the "wilt" out of hot weather or applied when you felt a nervous headache coming on.

Colognes, however, have come a long way since then. In fact, they have pyramided from their humble beginnings to glamorous, present-day necessities. They are used for pretty nearly every purpose for which a perfume or luxurious toilet water is used.

The expensive varieties of foreign-brew are sprayed on in much the same fashion as a rare perfume. Those with a pungent, out-of-door fragrance are used lavishly on the body after a shower and rub-down.

One of the very loveliest and quite the newest cologne on the market is one which combines the advantages of a fine French cologne with the allure and lasting fragrance of flowers in the rain.

Here indeed you will find the full strength and beauty of an old-fashioned garden after a soft, spring shower. All its lush sweetness seems to be gloriously captured in liquid form.

Apply a small quantity to the arms and shoulders and you will be amazed how its fragrance is developed after it has been applied to the skin. You'll notice, too, how very lasting is the odor of this cologne.

We are told that this quality comes from the fact that five percent of essential and perfume oils are used in this cologne—equal to and even greater than the amount often used in good perfumes. Be that as it may, we do know that its lovely scent is alluringly lasting.

Its fragrance is really like no other in the world—a floral bouquet and potpourri of fresh blooms. In fact we have no doubt but what this scent will become the subject of many attempts at duplication.

You are probably as familiar with the use of colognes as we are, but we would like to remind you that aside from its substitution for perfume extracts, it is particularly pleasant to use under the arms. For one thing it tends to check perspiration.

And a few drops poured into the water of the wash basin gives a delicate perfume to the skin with which it is washed. This co'ogne, while of rare floral odor, will harmoniously blend with any perfume. Hence you can unhesitatingly combine it with your own favorite perfume.

To learn the name of this inexpensive "flowers of rain cologne," call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Question: What causes warts? I have never had them until very recently, when a number suddenly appeared on my hands. Are they dangerous? And what is the best method of dealing with them? Jane F., Boston.

Answer: Warts are mysterious growths and there is no accounting for them. They often appear overnight (as in your case) and disappear as rapidly. Sometimes they stay for years. If they are located where the clothing rubs them, they should be removed. The X-ray is used in such cases. A wart that develops quickly and has a broken white edge is a menace, requiring immediate medical care. It is a senility wart, likely to become malignant. Those of the inoffensive variety often yield to external preparations. There is a new lotion on the market with a castor-oil base and it will not only safely remove warts, but corns as well. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the name of this preparation.

Question: You recently mentioned in your column something about a new dry shampoo for oily hair which did not contain orris root? My hair is excessively oily and I cannot afford a finger wave and shampoo more often than once every 10 days. Is this shampoo expensive? Also tell how it is used. D. D. G., Cambridge.

Answer: Sorry, but trade names cannot be mentioned in this column. However, if you care to write to me again and send along a stamped, self-addressed envelope, I will be glad to give you the name of this dry shampoo and the store where it is sold. This shampoo costs but slightly over 50 cents and is sponsored by one of the leading scalp specialists in the country. It is absolutely harmless and contains no orris root whatever. Full directions come with the powder.

Miss Marion Honored

The Christmasy decorations were carried out even in the debutante's dress at the dinner which Mrs. Gardiner Marion of Concord gave at the Town Club last evening in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Elizabeth Marion.

This was one of the many dinners given for members of the younger set before they went out to Milton to Virginia Richmond's debut dance.

Three large Christmas wreaths with a large red candle in the middle adorned the long table at Miss Marion's dinner. Even the place cards were each wound with a bit of green and the debutantes dress of striped red, white and silver reminded one of a Christmas candy cane.

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

By the time all the current "codes" have been either O. K.'d, discarded or declared unconstitutional, the women of the country may have found a way to use the alphabet to their own advantage and to establish a few new codes exclusively for femmes.

Helen Rowland

So few people know what the initials of the present codes stand for that we could use practically the same arrangement of letters—and they would mean just as much, and perhaps a little more.

NRA, for instance might mean No Run Around. And that would be a New Deal for thousands of patient wives.

NEW CCC MEANING

CCC might be interpreted to stand for lots of things, the most vital and appropriate being Comeacross-with-Christmas-Cash. Or Christmas Calls for A Check.

Lots of men have always been under the impression that PWA means Papa Wants Adventures. But a good strong lobby composed of women could easily change that to Pay Wives Allowances. Or Pay Women Alimony.

FRA, in the opinion of the average man, stands for Father Rules Always, but it wouldn't take long for a few logical femmes to prove to him that it stands for Father Rules—ALMOST.

AAA may vaguely stand for Autonomy, Absolutism and Autocracy in the hazy masculine mind. But it might just as well be translated as Additional Attention on Anniversaries—and give the women a break.

WRITE NEW CODES

While the women are at it, they might just as well do things thoroughly and add a few more brand new codes for femmes. Such as N. M. B.—No More Budgets. Or N. B. A. O.—No Blondes After Office Hours. And C. O. M.—Golf Only Monthly. And A. F. K. H.—A Few Kisses On Holidays.

Women have succeeded in putting across everything they've started out to put across, in the last twenty years. So, why should they be baffled by a little thing like changing codes to please themselves?

I Want You Only

CHAPTER 36

By ELENORE MEHERIN

He thought savagely: "If it hadn't been for you I would have gone a week ago."

But she came up and knelt at his side. "That information doesn't mean a thing. Naturally the address would be in her stepfather's name."

He said, doggedly: "That information means that I'm leaving on the first train I can get."

Her mouth hardened with fury.

She took a bundle of socks and began doubling them indiscriminately together.

Suddenly Rick's mind cleared. If Neil couldn't be located at the Amsterdam address it must mean that she had already gone to the hospital. He sprang again to the telephone.

With startled eyes Vera heard his message. It was to the Maternity Ward, Woman's Hospital, New York city.

"Please wire me collect immediately any information you have of Mrs. Richard Calhoun who is expected to enter the hospital early in May."

Vera said derisively: "Do you suppose the hospital keeps a check on patients whose children are not yet born?"

"I've a hunch," said Ricky, "that the baby will be there by the time I arrive tomorrow."

The packing went on in rather frenzied silence. Ricky snapped the suitcase and stood it against the wall.

Said Vera, with faintly disguised hostility: "Are you going even if the hospital says she hasn't yet entered?"

She stepped quickly to his side, caught his hands in hers. "You've got all of that, Ricky, and you've got me to consider. Don't I count for anything with you?"

"You do, indeed," he said, flushing. "But why does it make any difference to you?"

"I've counted on your going with me tonight. I don't want to be ditched at the last moment, and I've got this deal all cooked up with my uncle. Don't walk out on me!"

Ricky looked at her with long dubious quiet. "I've waited, Vera, this last week for the simple reason that I had to get this Saturday's pay check.

"There aren't stakes enough on earth to keep me here another night."

She walked toward the door, too angry to conceal her resentment and rage.

"Very well, good-by, then, but don't come weeping to me next time you're down to your last nickel. I should think—"

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Gushing Has Gone Out of Style

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IF YOU'RE pretty near the end of the twenties—say 29, or even 30—please don't gush and be glad, because "gushing" adds at least ten years to your age.

In mother's day, it was the thing to gush and be glad about pretty nearly everything—the weather, the day of the week, the season of the year, a ham sandwich or a new hat. But with jobs for women, girls have learned to gush less.

Styles change in behavior, just as they do in skirts, coats and the steeterass of feminine garb. Strange seems those be-plumed hats, which used to flare and sweep over pompadours, when you come across them today in photographs of stage favorites of a couple of generations ago.

Revolutions in hats and clothes are no greater than revolutions in human behavior. When the older generation formed its habits and its manners, girls weren't as sure of themselves as they are today.

Their "line," when mother was a girl and even a good deal later, was to act school-girlish, ignorant of the world, and bubblingly enthusiastic over everything from sodas to Shakespeare.

The sentimental young thing who could outgush the rest of the bunch was the most popular, and got most of the dates and the beaux as well. Look over the Best Sellers of a generation ago, and the phrase "bubbling, innocent youth" is almost a stencil.

You see, it wasn't enough to be sweet in those days; you had to serve it; and alas! it's this glad, gushing note that a good many of the older girls have preserved—and it dates them more than a pompadour would.

Perhaps Aunt Mayme doesn't look a minute over 30, and could deceive the most seasoned old dowager, or even a boy not long out of college. But when she converges to be bubblingly enthusiastic over everything, in and out of season, she begins to take back to those ladies who were very popular about the time of the Spanish-American War.

* * *

The girl of today is composed, unsmiling—perhaps even just a bit hard. She makes no effort to dramatize the fact that she is young and presumably inexperienced. In fact, she often pretends to be more experienced and worldly-wise than she really is.

Indeed, the modern girl is apt to ignore the question of age altogether. She can meet a woman of 50 on equal terms, or she can turn the head of a college boy. And all said and done, she is a much easier person to encounter than the old-fashioned girl who felt she must never stop smiling or giggling for a moment.

So, my dear young ladies—suppose that milestone of 30 or even 35 has cast its shadow upon you—please don't gush! It will give you away sooner than your first faint crow's feet or gray hair.

DEAR ELSIE:

Says Greenwood Woman

MRS. ANN N. SPAULDING, 6 Humphrey street, Greenwood, writes:

Dear Elsie:

No matter what subject you write on, you can always be depended upon to be original, fearless and different.

From your broad experience you know human nature from A to Z, and your viewpoints are always so unusual that one wonders, while reading, that the subject never presented itself in that light before!

Your choice of words and expressions is almost uncanny—in your description of any subject, from mess and mountain to modern marriage. The picture is brought clearly to one's mind.

American Man for the American Girl

By NELL BRINKLEY

THEY DO NOT LOOK SO DIFFERENT FROM OUR YOUNG MEN, usually, except for a certain positive facial stamp—and that aura that seems to actually color them, for some girls, that clings to the uniform of nobility—or other noble accoutrements.

We are not speaking particularly of those weaklings and gold-diggers among them whose sallies into marriage with our damsels we are all acquainted with. Foreign men have their same percentage of upstanding men, manly men, busy men, men of fine character, that ours have — BUT—somehow most of these latter seem to marry AT HOME. The American girl seldom gets THIS foreigner!

For all of them, their upbringing is different; their attitude toward women is certainly different—as many American girls discover to their surprise and discomfort.

LILLIAN INVITES MRS. BARNES TO PARTY

CHAPTER 329

LILLIAN gave an emphatic "I told-you-so nod" as she took the receiver from the hook and listened to the person calling our number.

"It's Harry, as I said," she threw over her shoulder, and then turned back to the telephone.

"Yes, Harry," she said, while Dicky spread both his hands and then clasped them as if in speechless admiration.

"Marvelous instance of psychic intuition!" he gibed with eyes fixed mischievously upon her. "Husband telephones few minutes' ago that he will phone again when the automobile caravan which he is chaperoning with both hands and feet reaches Fifty-sixth street and Second avenue. He's had just about time to get there, and—"

"Shut up!" she whispered venomously, and though Dicky continued to grin fiendly at her with what he, himself, calls "a Cheshire cat impersonation" he said no more.

BUDDING ROMANCE

"You're all there!" Lillian was saying into the telephone. "Everything all right? What's that? Marion wants to talk to me? Of course! Yes, I can guess what she wants. Hello! Mother's girl. Yes, I'll listen. You and Carolyn and Ronald and Bob send to drive home in Bob's car But that means a rumble seat, doesn't it? Oh! you have your coonskins! But what about your feet? Blankets? The boys appear to have provided for everything!"

"Well! Here's the way I'll settle it. If Mrs. Barnes approves, you may go. But you must ask her. What's that? Oh! That is a good joke. All right, darling. I give my permission. But tell Bob he's never to go over fifty, even on those long stretches of road. Let me talk to your father again."

How easily the words "your father" slipped from Lillian's lips! It sent fervent thanks to my particular joss that the words were as naturally accepted by Marion, and that no prejudice the girl had once held against her stepfather was now not even a memory.

INVITES MRS. BARNES

"Harry!" Lillian was speaking again. "Will you ask Mrs. Barnes —for Madge and me—if she will come out with your party and spend the week-end with us? Tell her we want her especially for the opening of Marion's lockbox. She has seen the box, you know, and knows the story. I don't want her to bother to get out of the car, or I'd ask her to come to the telephone. Yes, I'll hold the line."

She turned to us, evidently in explanation, while she kept the receiver close to her ear.

"Marion thinks she has the best joke ever on me," she said. "It seems that Marion and Carolyn had asked Mrs. Barnes for permission to drive down with the boys, and that she had referred them to me. Of course, Helena was there and had given her consent to Carolyn's going, but Mrs. Barnes wouldn't approve unless I gave my consent—and I was waiting for hers."

She turned back to the telephone.

ALONE WITH DICKY

"Oh! Splendid! How long? About three hours? No! That means speeding. Make it four. All right, I'll compromise on a little less. But I'll plan dinner on the assumption that it will be four. So long. And safe ride!"

She hung up the receiver and came swiftly over to me.

"Mrs. Barnes told Harry that she came in for a shopping trip tomorrow, and she will stay over Monday in the city instead. She said she wouldn't miss seeing that box opened for the world. Now I'll go out and plan with Katie where to put her, and I'll give Katie her own head for the dinner. She'll do a swell job I'm sure. You're not to worry your head one bit about it."

She shot a sudden pointing forefinger at me, and started for the door.

Subterfuge IN A Good CAUSE

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The infinite variety of Bridge hands makes it impossible to devise bidding conventions that will cover every conceivable situation.

As a matter of fact, this is fortunate—Bridge would not be game it is if players could simply follow formulas, never reasoning for themselves.

In today's hand, South recognized that the problem he found was out of the scope of convention, and solved it cleverly in his own way.

Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣
Double	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ◇ (1)	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) It is usually the case that one single bid is the crucial link in a bidding chain. When North took out his business double of opponents' two-bid, South realized that North must not only have a generally weak hand, but a poor spade suit as well. (Had North taken out the double because he felt that a game in hearts was in sight, he would have bid more than two hearts.)

South felt that a slam would be a laydown if he could locate two Queens in his partner's hand, together with heart support.

But how to get North to recognize, if he held the two Queens, that he should make a substantial bid on them and not worry over his spade strength?

Obviously, by indicating his distribution as nearly like his first bid), clubs (by his double of a low contract), and diamonds, with one no spades. Hence the four diamond bid—a deliberate misstatement in a good cause.

North cooperated beautifully, interpreting South's message perfectly. His two hearts approved that he placed a high valuation on his two red Queens—exactly as his partner had hoped he would.

The play was elementary, South merely taking care to force out the diamond Ace at an early stage, before West could discard most of his diamonds while South was ruffing clubs.

Mrs. Beeckman ON GOOD Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I expect to visit my home town during the holidays. I will have many calls from old friends and some from new acquaintances, and as I do not care to take the time to return all these calls during my short visit of two weeks, what would be proper—to send each a card after I return home? That is what I did last year, but I do not know whether or not this was what I should have done. B.

Only to send a card after you return home, in recognition and appreciation of these most friendly calls on you in your home town, seems to me a fairly bleak and ungracious way of acknowledging such warm-hearted friendliness.

It looks as if you were taking these visits in a too-casual and objective manner. You should, I believe, make some plan that will give you an opportunity of showing your gratitude for such kindness on the part of your old friends.

If you are sure that you really cannot take the time to return those visits, you could, I am sure, find time to telephone your thanks and have a bit of a visit by telephone.

Or, best of all, couldn't you plan to give one inclusive party for those friends? For instance, why not set aside one afternoon toward the middle of your visit, to give a tea or a cocktail party for them? You could write your invitations on your visiting cards or as notes, or telephone the invitations.

And you could give the party in the home at which you are staying, or, if this is not convenient, in the tea-room of a local hotel. This would take very little time; it would be inexpensive; and it would leave yourself a gracious hostess and an appreciative friend.

SORORITY PARTY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our sorority is planning a formal anniversary, and I will appreciate it if you will let me know if it is proper for the girls to give their escorts favors or boutonnieres? Is it proper for each person to order something different? Would it be proper for us to have a large anniversary cake with candles, to be lighted later in the evening? C.

It isn't necessary or appropriate for the girls to make this gesture. If there isn't a definite menu, it is proper for each guest to order from the menu-card what he or she wishes. Your plan of having a large anniversary cake and lighting it during the evening is a charming, dramatic one. This would be a gala and dramatic touch, and make the party very birthday-ish.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

CHRISTMAS SWEETS IN HOLIDAY TRAPPINGS

New Nut Delicacies

By MARTHA LEE

"VISIONS of sugarplums dance in their heads" long before the nights before Christmas. Every sock must have its lollypop, every table its plate of candy. Every tooth's a sweet tooth—but that's no news to you.

The news to you is what to make that's new and good and easy, and how to make it. Here, we do our best, and hope you like it.

Christmas isn't Christmas without stuffed dates—our modern sugarplums. Nice for gifts, and the children can make them themselves. Get the ready-pitted pasteurized kind, stuff them with nutmeats or uncooked fondant filling, then roll in sugar by shaking a few at a time in a paper bag with granulated sugar. To make spiced dates add cinnamon to sugar; or add cocoa to sugar for chocolate flavor.

Salted nuts are easy to prepare at home and make gifts suggestions of themselves or fill in with a package of candy. Have corn on hand, too, to be popped—it's loads of fun.

PEPPMINT LOLLYPOPS

2 cups sugar
½ cup white corn syrup
1 cup water
Few drops of oil of peppermint
Coloring

Cook sugar, corn syrup and water, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Continue cooking without stirring to 310 deg. F. (or hard crack when dropped in cold water). Last 20 minutes cooking should be slow to prevent discoloration. When done, remove from fire, add flavoring and desired coloring and stir only enough to mix. Pour a little of mixture on oiled platter and press wooden skewer into edge of each lollypop. 2 doz. lollypops.

SALTED NUTS

Select perfect nut meats for salting. Peanuts and almonds are blanched before salting. There are two principal methods for salting nuts. (1) baking and (2) frying. Each method has its adherents.

BAKED SALTED NUTS

Spread the moist nuts in a single layer over the surface of a baking sheet or shallow pan. If an iron pan is used it is advisable to cover it with a sheet of parchment paper to prevent discoloration of the nuts. Sprinkle the nuts evenly with salt in the proportion of 2 teaspoons of salt to one pound of shelled nuts. The moisture on the surface of the nuts will cause the salt to adhere. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about 20 minutes. Stir the nuts occasionally to promote even cooking. The nuts will become crisp on cooling.

Some cooks like to add butter as well as salt to the nuts during baking. One teaspoon is sufficient for one cup of shelled nuts. Buttered nuts should be drained on absorbent paper on removal from the oven.

FRIED SALTED NUTS

Blanched almonds and blanched raw peanuts are the most commonly fried. Put a layer of thoroughly drained nuts in a frying basket. Plunge into fat which has been heated to 360 deg. F. Cook until the nuts are golden in color; avoid overcooking for the color of the nuts deepens on removal from the fat. Remove from frying kettle; allow surplus fat to drain. Transfer to fresh absorbent paper and sprinkle with salt while hot.

BUTTER CRUNCH

2 cups sugar
1½ cups thin cream
1½ cups white corn syrup
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ tsp. salt

Put sugar, syrup, salt and cream into saucepan; stir over fire until sugar dissolves. Cook to 250 deg. F. (firm ball) stage stirring often; add butter and cook to 260 deg. F. (hard ball); add vanilla and pour in thin layer on oiled baking sheet.

QUICK FONDANT

¼ cup sweetened condensed milk
1¼ cups confectioners' (4X) sugar
½ tsp. vanilla, or any desired flavoring

Sift sugar into mixing bowl. Add sweetened condensed milk gradually. Blend well. Add flavoring. Continue blending until smooth and creamy. Shape into small balls and place in fruits or use for any of the fondant candies.

MINCE MEAT CUP CAKES

3-5 cup butter
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup mince meat
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups sifted pastry flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup sour milk

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together thoroughly. Add eggs, one at a time, beating until fluffy after each addition. Add mince meat and vanilla. Sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt together, and add alternately with the milk. Bake in greased cup cake pan in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) for 20 minutes. (Loaf pan, moderate oven (375 deg. F.) for 50 minutes.) Makes 16 cup cakes.

Good Health Greatest Gift

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

TIME HAS been dragging, dear children, but Christmas is nearly here at last. And what a day it will be! Crowded stockings, many gifts, wonderful dinner and a Christmas tree!

The very mention of Christmas brings cheer to the heart. This is because it is set apart for happiness, kindliness and good will. It is the day celebrated as the birthday of Jesus.

One reason why the name of Jesus makes such an appeal to mankind is because the human side of that life is so well known. He was once a little boy and had all the experience of youth. We are told of His birth and babyhood and childhood. St. Luke says of him: "And the Child grew and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of His shewing unto Israel."

MOST PRECIOUS GIFT

His parents were wise in their bringing up of their little child. He was an out-of-door boy, running in the sands of the deserts. I expect those little feet were often stung with nettles and sandburs. Perhaps He got cactus thorns in the hands which later were to be more terribly wounded. But His manner of living caused the child to grow and He "waxed strong," the Bible says.

Christmas is a day of generous giving. The fond parents, so far as their means permit, shower their children with appropriate gifts more precious than any other of worldly value—that is the gift of a perfect body and robust health.

Success in life depends largely upon health. Even the great mission of Jesus would have been restricted had He been hampered by a puny body and aching limbs. He could not have waxed strong in spirit had He been suffering in the flesh.

GUIDE CHILD TO HEALTH

If your child or grandchild is not vigorous, alert and tireless in energy, find out why. Talk with your doctor, but above all use your own common sense. Do not pamper and spoil the child. Watch his weight and color and the way he sleeps. Give him good food at regular times.

With care on your part the child you prize as the apple of your eye, will grow and wax strong in spirit. Then next Christmas there will be more than flimsy and short-lived gifts of toys, with a full year of proper supervision you will have added greatly to the health of body and brain a priceless gift.

For each of my readers I wish a "Merry, Merry Christmas!"

Answers to Health Queries

M. S. Q.—What can be done for sleeplessness, wrought up nerves and a feeling of restlessness? I seem to eat well and have nothing to upset me unduly.

A.—You may need a complete change and rest. Make every effort to improve your general health. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send addressed stamped envelopes with their questions. All inquiries should be addressed to him in care of this newspaper.

AUSTEN LAKE

Walter O'Hara Gives Himself A Christmas Kiss

WHO ELSE BUT FLAMBOYANT Walter, the O'Hara of Narragansett, Lord of the pari-mutuel pots, and Grandee of the gaudy gesture, would ship out several thousand holiday cards that smack less of Christmas cheer than a personal cock-crow for betting benefits which a kindly Providence (R. I.) has showered into his cash catch-alls.

AUSTEN LAKE

The greeting, large as the Ladies' Home Journal and colored like a Chinese bride, are ideographs to show Narragansett as the No. 1 money track of the country and O'Hara as the head profiteer.

The decorative theme is a field of galloping horses, with a burlesque race program set kitty-cornered in the background, and post positions on the card corresponding with the saddle cloth numbers on the pen-and-ink nags.

Only, Narragansett and its eight track rivals are listed instead of horse entries and the track operators instead of jockeys.

Naturally old No. 1, a chestnut beast with a monkey man in green-and-cream satins, is leading the pack over the black line. And trailing the herd like fat, broken-down cows are the giddyaps which represent Rockingham and Agawam.

The race symbolizes money which poured through the pari-mutuel mills and the horses the comparative profits wrung from the public.

But closer study of the card reveals covert jibes at rival promoters, like referring to J. E. Widener's Hialeah Park as "Tropical Fest," and citing the owners at Rockingham as Lou, Bill, Red and Joe, thereby implying the secret, and somewhat unsavory, ownership which Smith has repeatedly denied. Agawam is listed as "Faint Hearted stable."

A sprig of holly crowns the brow of Sir Walter's well fed portrait, as a Christmas souvenir to the Tiny Tims of this betting

Sow's Ear, Silk Purse

A LETTER TO THIS COLUMN makes the brash remark concerning the recent Johnson-Reynolds-Manush trade between the Red Sox and Washington, that "One cannot make a silk purse from a sow's ear."

Oh, can't you though!

History, or rather, the Paper Trade Journal shows that Dr. Arthur D. Little of Boston did the trick long ago. The Trade Journal says:

"Discovering the component elements of the viscous fluid made by silkworms, Dr. Little rendered 100 pounds of sows' ears, and successfully produced a silk thread suitable for spinning. After which he wove the purse, complete with tassel, on a small hand loom."

So there!

Shanghai Gesture

THE CREATIVE GENIUS of wrestling dramatists is limitless. Here comes publicity-starved Billy Sandow, who since being bucked loose as Strangler Lewis' manager in 1932 has been pot-boiling as booking agent for Everett Marshall, the San Francisco matman whom a Philadelphia athletic commission once ordered barged for psychopathic study after he had heaved a referee over the ropes.

But here's the joker. Suit is filed in Columbus, O., well out of range of any of the defendants—which in legal circles is known as the Shanghai gesture. The proof of Billy's publicity shrewdness is shown by the fact that he gets notice in this practically priceless pillar of type.

Handcuffing the Military

THE BRASS HATS in Washington have fired a battery salvo into the army officers who have been earning extra wages by coaching football at colleges where they are stationed as military professors.

This will affect Captain Biff Jones and Major Ralph Sasse after their present tours at Oklahoma and Mississippi have ended.

A captain's base pay in the army is only $2000, increasing with service and enhanced by heat, light and ration allowances on detached duty. That of a major starts at $2400.

Thus officers of these grades, after long years of service and patient waiting, are not blessed with great spending power. And the $5000 per annum extra that Jones and Sasse earn is a grateful boon to their pockets.

This brings to mind that the salaries of college coaches is greatly exaggerated on the whole. There are not 18 coaches in the country earning annual incomes of $8000 or more, and the average is nearer 1000.

This is a letdown from the unofficial survey made in 1929, when 47 coaches admitted to autumn earnings between $6000 and $17,000, with Lou Little of Columbia, then as now, top salaried man.

Industrious Bomber

JOE LOUIS' INDUSTRY IN the fight business, including 36 professional fights since July 4 of last year, should make him the most prolific knuckle-duster in the history of the ring. Jeffries fought only 28 times in his professional career, Bob Fitzsimmons 46, Corbett 35, Willard 35, John L. Sullivan 40, Dempsey 76, Baer 48 . . . "Pat" Manley's correct copper-plate signature is LeRoy Bernard Manley. He got the Pat as a Marine captain during the war, while chuming with an officer named Mike . . . One of the real reasons that Mike Jacobs "postponed" the Louis-Castanaga fight, which is actually a cancellation, is because his Havana spies reported that the Cuban was training on frijoles, tortillas and chile con carne and that the fight wouldn't draw a coroner's jury. One look at Castanaga's waist, which was a cascade of suet with ripples of lard, like the frosting on a fudge sundae, convinced Jacobs that Louis might never recover his fist after sinking it in the senor's jiggly, fathomless middle. Jacobs agreed to reimburse Castanaga for food consumed in training, which he said was enough to supply a lumber camp crew during a hard winter.

M'Avoy Earns Lewis Go

HAS RISKO DOWN SIX TIMES

New York, Dec. 21 (US) — Jack McAvoy, British Empire middleweight and light heavyweight champion, making his second American start in Madison Square Garden, established his claim to power with a first-round knockout of Eddie "Babe" Risko, American middleweight champion.

The finish came after two minutes and 48 seconds of fighting. Risko's title was not at stake.

Risko rose at once, groggy and wobbly, only to walk into a flurry of furious rights and lefts that sent him down for a count of seven.

Another right to the jaw sent Risko down for four, the force of the follow through carrying McAvoy to the floor. A series of jolting blows sent Risko down for eight.

Risko rose again, dead on his feet, only to go down for the final time under the Englishman's persistent barrage. Risko weighed 161¾ to 158¾ for McAvoy.

Frankie Connelly of Boston, protege of Jack Sharkey, scored a technical knockout over James J. Merriott of Oklahoma in the third round of a scheduled eight.

Connelly, weighing 207½, pounded Merriott at will throughout the fight, which was stopped when the Oklahoman, who weighed 202, received a bad cut over the eye.

20,000 See Lou Win

Paris, Dec. 21 (US)—Lou Brouillard, former world welterweight champion from Worcester, Mass., and Danielson, Ct., won a decision in 15 rounds over Gustav Roth of Belgium here.

Brouillard completely outclassed the Belgian, but was unable to put over a finishing punch.

Boxing Results

By Jack Conway

Al McCoy and Tony Shucco were unable to settle the question of ring supremacy in their 12-round bout before 8500 fans at the Garden. The offical decision was a draw, but after the verdict was rendered followers of each boxer were claiming "we wuz robbed."

Referee Johnny Brassil voted for Shucco, Judge Billy McMenimen for McCoy, while Judge Jim Carrig cast his ballot for a draw.

"I thought the bout was even going into the last round," Referee Brawill told me. "Shucco won the last session, so I voted for him."

McMenimen was of the opinion that McCoy's aggressiveness and heavier punching entitled him to the verdict.

Carrig's score card indicated he believed McCoy was the aggressor, scored the harder punches, but that Shucco proved the better boxer.

HUGGER

McCoy fought a hard, bitter battle. He was in there trying to win by a knockout in every round. He was a bit over anxious, and as a result he was wild in the delivery of many of his punches.

Shucco's chief fault was holding. When the men went into a clinch, Shucco would lock McCoy's arms under his own arms, and then hold on for all he was worth.

Shucco looked bad while holding, and this counted against him. Shucco's holding tactics also made it difficult for McCoy to punch as freely as he wished.

Shucco was in fine condition in view of the fact he has not been very active of late. He took McCoy's hefty punches well, and had enough vitality left to make a finish in the last couple of rounds.

McCoy tired even more than Shucco in the closing rush. There isn't anything that will take more out of a boxer than missing punches.

AL'S MISTAKE

McCoy would have done better if he had feinted Shucco more, made the latter back up against the ropes and then blazed away with both dukes when Tony was in a position where he could not very well pull away from blows.

Shucco did his most effective work with a long, sharp left hook. He delivered this sock to the head and body with equal effect.

McCoy was a two to one favorite at ring time. His backers had the jitters as Shucco made his rally in the eleventh and twelfth sessions.

There were no knockdowns. In the seventh round after McCoy drove Shucco into a corner by scoring two left hooks to the jaw, Tony seized Al's gloves and McCoy slipped to the canvas.

McCoy did his best scoring at close quarters when he banged away for the body with sharp left and right hand punches. The force of some of the belts turned Shucco park ways around.

Shucco at times had a sick look on his face as McCoy scored to the body. Tony complained to Referee Brassil several times against alleged low punching. The blows which were protested by Shucco were just on the line and therefore in fair territory.

McCoy continued his drive through the seventh round. He matched his aggressiveness and punch against Shucco's speed and

While the Bruins are cooling their heels in New York today, waiting for their tilt with the Rangers tomorrow night, the Cubs are bussing up to Springfield for a set-to with the Indians.

It's been some time since our Bruins have tasted defeat and, if they manage to get by the Rangers tomorrow, they'll be tough to stop.

Bankrupt, Agawam Files Plea

Petition to the Federal Court for permission to reorganize the Agawam Hunting and Breeders' Association under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act was filed today with the clerk of Federal Court.

Batholomew J. Brickley, counsel for the racing group, filed the petition, which lists current assets of $1275 and current Liabilities of $303,759.

The officers of the corporation admit insolvency, but ask for the benefits of the Section 77B, which would permit them, in effect, to suspend certain indebtednesses until their operations showed a technical profit.

Listed under plant and equipment was the figure $353,496 and under "federal admission taxes" $27,105.

Tech Five Wins In Last Minute

Trailing 25 to 12 at half time, the Tech basketball team turned on a brilliant scoring splurge in the second half to beat Mass. State, 31 to 30.

Captain Bill Garth led the Engineers in their comeback by sinking 5 floor and 1 foul shots for a total of 11 points in the second half. His total for the evening was 15. His winning goal came in the last 30 seconds.

This was the second Tech game decided by the margin of a single point. Last Tuesday they were edged out by R. U., 27 to 26.

HARVARD WINS At Brown, 3-0

Providence, Dec. 21 — Harvard hockey team scored its third straight victory of the season here by defeating Brown, 3 to 0.

DANCING DOLL—WILSON

DAVE'S Choice in IN 5TH

MAD DASH IN FIRST RACE

By Dave Wilson

DANCING DOLL IN 5th—BEST

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 21—A. W. Abbott's Dancing Doll, beaten favorite in the Cocoanut Grove purse, should make amends for lost prestige in the Citrus Handicap, five and one-half furlongs feature this afternoon.

This sweet-running filly was evidently a trifle short of work in her most recent endeavor.

Away in the first flight, she forced a blistering pace until well into the homestretch before weakening to finish third to Klevex and Scotch Gold.

FIRST RACE

Dave Wilson

MAD DASH, a fleet maiden filly from the Mary Hirsch stable, has several cracking New England races to recommend her for top honors. She will be coming up razor sharp. CICARY was barely nosed out by Muscle In on Thursday. In front of that he placed to Joan D. Those efforts stamp him as the main danger. JOAN F. figures well on best New York races.

SECOND RACE

Prince Drake, Screen, General A.

PRINCE DRAKE was a corking winner over Belle Grier on opening day. He needs only to duplicate that performance in order to again earn brackets. SCREEN turned in an excellent third to the top one that day. She will be favored by a slight shift in weights. GENERAL A., if sent right back, should not experience much difficulty in saving the short end.

THIRD RACE

Bonanza, Herowin, King's Pleasure

Just have to give BONANZA one more chance. This good plater was a beaten favorite in practically the same company a few days back. HEROWIN just missed getting up to trim Wester Lad last time. KING'S PLEASURE gets the next best nailing on the strength of a corking second to Minton.

FOURTH RACE

Don Creole, Empty Bottle, Speed

DON CREOLE turned in a smashing victory over Glory Greenock, Polly Reigh and other fleet juveniles on opening day. He is beautifully spotted under 109 pounds. EMPTY BOTTLE holds plenty of class, as may be attested by a brilliant Western record, six furlongs in 1:16. SPEED whirled five pastels in 1:01 for a final. A good race record entitles him to the next best consideration.

FIFTH RACE

Dancing Doll, Rock X, Below Zero

DANCING DOLL will have ROCK X to down for major honors. The latter finished third to Little Dinah and Top Dog under weak handling on Thursday. He appeared pounds the best that day. BELOW ZERO has an excellent New York record to recommend her for the minor award.

SIXTH RACE

Taunton, Unencumbered, Reservist

TAUNTON, always partial to this course, hasn't graced the winner's circle since early this spring, but the MacKenzie colt carried eight furlongs in 1:43 under double wraps for a final. UNENCUMBERED looks the best recent form of the party. RESERVIST merits better than a fighting chance on New England races.

SEVENTH RACE

Triangular, Major General, Our Admiral

TRIANGULAR hops up as the outstanding wagering proposition of the card. This consistent plater has been on from his race since the last Narragansett meeting, but he has trained brilliantly and will be coming up fit and ready to run for a king's ransom. The opposition is little more than he drubbed in New England. His concluded training with a breezing eight panels in 1:43. MAJOR GENERAL and OUR ADMIRAL figure to offer the contention. Both were winners last time.

DAMON RUNYON MIKE JACOBS

A GREAT REPORTER, Damon Runyon, and a great promoter, Mike Jacobs, sit down at Coral Gables and talk over the Cuban situation, as pertains to the Joe Louis-Isidor Gastanaga bout. The bout, originally scheduled for December 29, has been put over to February 2. Chances are that it never will be held, Gastanaga is reported to look like an also ran in the Fat Men's race.

M'KAY Digs Up Foes FOR PIN KING

By Ed Cogswell

Bowling enthusiasts have apparently settled on the single point of discussing the proposition of grabbing from Joe Bonigli his championship crown.

Archie Walsh gave the movement an extra push with his challenge to the title holder. Now from all corners of the bowling world are springing forth aspirants ready to tackle Bonigli at almost a minute's notice.

John McKay writes that it would do his heart good to see the champion in battle with Francis Chimenillo, and well he would know that he had been in a match ere the winner was decided.

In case Bonigli wants to sidestep Chimenillo, then McKay furthermore states that he might have plenty of action in defeating any of the following:

Nat Waldman of Shanleys, Charley Harrigan, runner up to the champ; Dan Kenney, of Jamaica Plain and several more he can name if Bonigli desires to meet the top-notchers.

Frankie DeSisto, of the Murray alleys, comes across with the good news that "Ducky" Holmes, one of the aces in the City League of 25 years ago, is still going strong and handsome.

In a one-ball tournament at Murrays, "Ducky" led home a field of 27 crack bowlers, proving that his eye and arm are just as good as ever in picking up the pins.

Xmas Mat Show At Arena

Christmas night wrestling, an ancient custom in Boston dating back to the days of grappling in the smoke-clouded Opera House, will be revived by Promoter Alex MacLean at the Boston Arena next Wednesday night.

MacLean plays Santa Claus for the wrestling fans with a merry carnival of seven bouts, featured by a battle between Leo Numa and Charlie Strack, with 14 other cauliflowered giants anxious to make Xmas night anything but a peaceful one.

Dempsey Denies He Paid for Protection

New York, Dec. 21 (INS)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, denied he paid for "protection" for his restaurant, when subpoenaed by Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey's racket investigation, it was revealed today.

"Dewey got word that Dempsey had paid certain sums to an association to let him operate the restaurant," his partner, Jacob Amron, said. "They subpoenaed both of us and we went down there. We told them there is no such thing."

Dartmouth Plays N. U. At Arena

The Huskies are given slight chance of toppling the "Wheap Big Injun" from Hanover, but that is because Coach Nelson Raymond's scrawl is composed of newcomers.

WRIGHT Stevenson IN TIE

By Associated Press

Wayne Wright, riding at Tropical Park, and Charley Stevenson, campaigning at the Fair Grounds, entered today's competition deadlocked in their duel for jockey honors on th American turf.

Stevenson, an apprentice, rode his 186th winnr of the year yesterday to tie his veteran rival Wright, finding it difficult to get mounts, went without a winner for the second straight day.

Just as Hirsch Jacobs has a strangle hold on trainer's honors for the year, so has George Alexander sewed up th runner-up position. The conditioner of J. E. Smallman's Canadian horses has saddled 94 winners, nearly a score less than Jacobs. In 1932, the Canadian trainer topped the field but the last three years has been the runner-up to Jacobs.

Cy Rigler, Veteran Umpire Dies

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (AP) — Charles (Cy) Rigler, National League umpire, died in a hospital today. He was 53.

Rigler "called 'em" in more than 6100 baseball games but never played in organized baseball. He joined the National League in 1906.

He is credited with introducing the custom of raising the right arm to denote a called strike.

HALL IN ST. JOE'S

Outstanding Fighter in N. E.

What promises to be the outstanding amateur boxing show of the season will be presented by the St. Joseph's T. A. S. tonight when the second of a series of elimination tournaments for the Diamond Ring championships is held at Mechanics Building.

Providence is sending four boxers to tonight's tournament, including Henry Van Leisten, promising young heavyweight, while Nat Sor, Olympic boxer in 1932, will bring a team from Fall River.

The Man Who's Remembered Vividly on Jan. 1st Should Not Be Forgotten Dec. 25th

The secret archives of Justice reveal a gruesome Christmas case history of an Xmas crime. A family of three were killed under the most unusual circumstances. The 21-year-old son was strangled by a necktie connected of three parts abyssinian sunset, two parts prayer rug and one part nightmare. The youthful slaughter was choked with a mouth full of dessicated fauns from a box labeled "cigars." The mantel and the tubing of a modernistic chair draped around her skull like a neon halo. It seems that the head of the household cracked under the strain of receiving those Yule offerings year after year. The portfolio of the crime celebre was docketed justifiable homicide and the case was closed.

My pater (old man to you) was the recipient of a smoking jacket many Christmases ago. It tickled him silly and he wore it until it fell apart. The idea is still good today, although the style has changed. Today's smoking jacket's come in gay tattersall flannels trimmed with ribbed silk, in houndstooth checks and district plaids. The new models are warm as toast and as up-to-the-minute as Major Bowes' gang.

It chimes on the half hour and the humidor keeps the tobacco pleasantly moist and flavored.

Women rout boredom with a knitting needle or bridge table. They keep busy while idling, which shows a swell philosophy. A man's idle moments should be taken up with hobbies. The building of model ships is fascinating, intriguing and pleasant. Plans and materials are available to construct models from tiny bottle versions to 36-inch full-rigged schooners. MILLNER SPURNS PRO OFFERS

Mr. Boston Xmas Nightmare For Danno

By Jack Conway

DAN O'MAHONEY, world heavyweight wrestling champion, is experiencing the same fate that comes to every titleholder. He is being shot at from every section of the country by grapplers who believe they should get title recognition.

Yvon Robert, 21-year-old Montreal heavyweight, has claimed O'Mahoney's championship because the latter will not meet him.

Mr. Boston

He says he has a contract with Paul Bowser guaranteeing him a tussle with O'Mahoney, but to date he has failed to prove that the Irishman is a party to this agreement. Robert meets Ed Don George at the Garden next Friday night.

O'Mahoney, it appears, signed to clash with the winner of the Hans Steinke-Leo Numa bout. When Numa was unable to go through with the tussle, Robert was substituted for him and tossed Steinke in seven minutes.

In Pennsylvania, O'Mahoney is under suspension because he refused to clash with Serge Kalmikoff, who is the pet of the wrestling solons in Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania Athletic Commission is conducting a wrestling tournament and will crown the winner as champion.

Everett Marshall of Columbus, Ohio, who is under the management of Billy Sandow, former pilot of Strangler Lewis, is also shooting at O'Mahoney.

MAT TITLE

IT IS interesting to go into the record books and get the facts on the wrestling championship. The late Frank Smith compiled some interesting data on this matter. Smith wrote as follows:

"There never was any question about Frank Gotch being world heavyweight champion from 1908 to 1913. Then Gotch retired and turned his title over to Charley Cutler, who lost to Joe Stecher in 1915.

"The Nebraskan lost to Earl Caddock in 1917. Caddock went to war and on his return to the United States dropped the crown to Joe Stecher in 1919. He in the same year lost it to Ed (Strangler) Lewis who, before the season elapsed, felt before Stanislaus Zbyszko.

"The same year (1920) Ed Lewis won a return bout with the Pole, holding the title until 1925 when he was beaten by Wayne Munn who the same year lost to Stanislaus Zzyszko.

"Before the season ended Joe Stecher won the title from Zbyszko which he held until 1928 when he was beaten by Ed Lewis who the next year lost to Gus Sonnenberg.

"Sonnenberg revolutionized wrestling through the flying tackle, Lewis tried six times to win the title back from Sonnenberg but failed. Finally late in 1930 Sonnenberg lost to Ed Don George.

"In the spring of 1931, George, physically unfit, lost to Lewis and three weeks later Lewis lost to Henri DeGlane."

George in turn lost to Dan O'Mahoney at Braves Field last July. Danno defeated Jim London at Fenway Park last June. London had the backing of the New York Athletic Commission, Pennsylvania Athletic Commission and other athletic bodies.

By his victories over George and London the youthful O'Mahoney was established as undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion of the world.

SETS MARK

O'MAHONEY arrived in New York on December 15, 1934. He engaged in his first wrestling bout in America at the Boston Garden early in January, 1935. He won from Ernie Dusek.

During 1935, O'Mahoney has won 154 bouts. He has wrestled in the principal cities of the United States and Canada. He has defeated all comers and established himself as the greatest drawing card wrestling has ever known.

During 1935, according to figures furnished by Jack McGrath, O'Mahoney has attracted $10,000 persons to the box office, while the receipts at his shows have amounted to $822,000.

Danno's "Irish Whip" has also given something new to wrestling. As champion, he will have his headaches, but will also gain glory and earn a fortune. He has proved a popular champion. This explains why the contenders are anxious to meet the Irishman.

All-America End Going to Work

Sensible Kid

KNOWS GRID FAME IS FLEETING

By Murray Kramer

"No."

This is Wayne Millner's two letter answer to all the teams in the National Professional Football League.

The Salem football hero who left home a little over three years ago to start unknown at Notre Dame returned home for Christmas vacation this week a national figure with more All-America honors than the owner of an "also ran" has excuses.

"Professional football may be all right," says Wayne," but I played the game because I loved it.

"If I have any more to do with football, it will be as an assistant coach for a year or two while I get set in some type of business."

LAUDS PAL

Millner feels that football owes him nothing. He gave a lot of time to the sport but the return, to his mind, more than repaid him. His pay-off, however, was in fun and in competition, not in $$$$ as was inferred by Prof. Owen.

In fact when to youre truly and a photographer visited Wayne he was reading Bill Shakespeare's article in the Boston Evening American and was getting quite a kick out of the broadside his pal took at the N. L. T. professor.

Wayne was quite blunt about the whole matter

"If they were passing out the bucks, I must have been out in left field with mittens on both hands, for I know that I am finding the going plenty tough. We have to study out there at South Bend, and don't make any mistake about it.

"In addition to my class room work, study and football," continued Millner, "I 'hashed' (waited on table) and worked in the gymnasium. Truthfully, there were times that the idea of a payroll would have been O. K. with me."

The fact that he is the first end ever to win All-American honors at Notre Dame, plus the recognition he received because of his many "Frank Merriwells" might have given any one of a thousand person a warped view on the future—but not this Millner lad.

He knows that a few years from now his clippings will be as faded as the memory of football fans who want their heroes new every year.

(Tomorrow another article on Wayne Millner will appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Highlights and incidents on his colorful career at Notre Dame will be told.)

'BILL'S RIGHT,' CHIRPS RAMBLER PASS SNATCHER

Foxx' Only Slump Came in 1931

(Picture from International News Photograph Serv.)

WAYNE MILLNER, Notre Dame's All-America end, who is home in Salem for the holidays, reading a story by Bill Shakespeare, his teammate, in the Boston Evening American. Wayne agrees entirely with Bill that Professor Owen is way off on a tangent as far as football players being paid at Notre Dame is concerned.

Fell Below .300

BUT HOPPED To .364 IN 1932

CHAPTER ELEVEN

By Jimmy Foxx

(As told to Austen Lake)

I had my worst slump during the season of 1931, when my batting average fell below .300 for the only time in my major league career, and yet, strangely enough, I felt that I was hitting the ball squarely and as often as I had ever done.

Only the hits were going directly into the hands of opposing fielders. There was nothing to do about it except to wait until the break came.

The next year I came out of it with a bang, hit .364 and missed tying Babe Ruth's home run record of 60 home runs by two.

I might add that the rule making a ball that bounced into the outfield stand, which had been a home run a year or so previously, was limited to two bases then.

I recall that one of the Philadelphia sports writers figured out that had I been given benefit of the bouncing homer I would have hit 70 that year.

'SPARK'

Let a drop our bat for a moment and touch on some of the interesting experiences which I have had in my major league career. It was during the season of 1929 that I came into my own as a full-fledged regular with a job all my own.

When the club started North from Fort Myers after the training season, I knew I had made the grade. A new feeling of confidence swept over the club, and even Connie Mack's gray eyes, in spite of the years of discouraging seasons that he had witnessed, seemed alight with expectation.

Now I want to make this point. There are times when even a medi ocre ball club can believe in itself will beat out a really good ball club that lacks a team spirit.

Only players know what it means to say of a certain man whose putts are dropping, "He is hot." In baseball we say a team is "on fire"

By way of contrast let me point to the athletics of 1932 and compare them with the Athletics of 1932. The makeup of the two teams was identical, yet the 1929 unit "took fire" and had the ability to drive in the runs when we needed them.

I think we must have made a record in staging eighth and ninth inning rallies that year. But later our "spark" was mysteriously missing, and we felt as though we were dragging some sort of psychological weight.

It has been no end of a puzzle to baseball men, why a winning team cannot go on winning indefinitely, as long as it remains physically fit. I wonder myself why we did not win again in 19—. The late Miller Huggins may have had the answer when he said:

"The life of the best pennant winning ball club is no longer than three years. Not because the players have worn themselves out at the end of that time, but because, surprising as it seems, they get tired of winning.

PENNANT

"The pennant no longer holds a challenge. The hunt is over, and there is nothing to do but take the team apart and start to rebuild it."

Connie Mack undoubtedly recognized that fact, just as he did at the end of the 1925 season when he broke up that famous combination and scattered it around the league.

And that may be why he broke up his latest set of champions.

But in 1929 we were all pennant hungry and every one of us was hitting on high. I caught the home run fever early and during the year drove out thirty-three, just one less than Simmons. Boy, what a pounding we handed out!

Here is the way our wrecking crew ended up that season—Haas .313, Cochrane .331, Simmons .365, Foxx .354, Miller .330, Dykes .327. It'll lay that against any so-called "Murderer's Row" in the history of the game.

Old Holders Offered New Stock

Bob Quinn Puts $100,000 Worth on Market

By Joe Cashman

They also learn the complete details of the debts that caused the National League to declare the old club bankrupt. Even baseballs were owned for to the total of $6,450.

Reducing high finance to the most simple language possible, these share-owners are informed that approximately $100,000 worth of stock, representing about one-third of a new issue, has been set aside for them to purchase.

The new issue will be distributed in units consisting of one share of Class A stock at $97 and three shares of Class B stock at $1 per share.

ADAMS' TIEUP

Bob Quinn, with backing, will personally subscribe for approximately $150,000 worth of the new issue and, become the majority stockholder. He'll also have a contract calling for an annual salary and providing him an opportunity to acquire more stock.

Because of Judge Landis' objection to any tie-up between baseball and racing, Charles F. Adams, majority stockholder prior to the forfeiture of the franchise, will own no stock.

However, in return for the assistance he is now giving Quinn in making financial arrangements, Adams will have a privilege of buying certain of Quinn's holdings in the event he severs his racing connections at some future date.

Any minority stockholders who ignore the offer to invest new capital will be completely "out of luck" as far as getting any return on their original investment is concerned.

DECEMBER 31

"That may sound rather harsh," stated Quinn, "but actually these stockholders are getting the best break possible.

"When the National League declared the Braves' franchise forfeited, the stockholders lost all their equity in the club. Now they get a chance to come back.

"For each $100 they invest, they'll have a share of new preferred stock in addition to three shares of Class B stock which will represent as much equity as $100 gave them in the old setup.

The statement of assets and liabilities show that the old stock was worthless.

"If the franchise hadn't been declared forfeited, it could have continued only if the stockholders paid assessments and they would have had to put up far more than $100 of new capital for every three shares they owned or lose their holdings.

"We don't need any new subscriptions for stock. With the assured support I now have, we can operate if none of the old stockholders buys into the new organization. The offer is made simply to protect the former minority stockholders to the fullest extent possible."

The stockholders are informed that a meeting will be held at Braves headquarters at the Copley Plaza on Tuesday morning, December 31, at which time they are expected to be prepared either to purchase the new stock or withdraw from the picture entirely.

Among the liabilities are listed Real estate taxes, $17,838; rent of Braves Field, $12,500; baseballs, $6450 ,salaries to office help, $840, bank loans, $225,000, National League loans, $17,585.40.

It's evident that they will make no effort to influence the minority stockholders one way or another.

School Ice Leagues Open

By Will Connell

School hockey whirled into the sports picture with four Bay State League games at the Arena, three Greater Boston League games at the Garden, this afternoon.

The Cambridge Latin-Melrose event was the headline contest at the Garden. Both have been tagged a contender for the title.

Coach Jack Culhane's nicely balanced Cambridge group had a brother line for starting trio in Jim, Walter and Al Boudreau, and an able second line of Frank Briand, Bill Robillard and Mort Buckley.

Ray Chausson, Pat Carey and Hein Bendreau, fourth of the brothers, on the first team, were set to divide defense tasks, and with Buddy Kramer in goal the Cantabs were formidable.

Kramer, star goalie at Rindge last year, transferred to Latin and thereby made the team a good bet to grab top rating.

Melrose had enough forwards and fair defense strength, but with out an experienced goalie expected trouble.

The Stoneham-Rindge and Newton-Medford games shaped up as close. The fourth scheduled game, between Belmont and Arlington, was postponed because of the death of Sanford Comery, principal at Belmont high.

Framingham, Walpole and Need ham appear outstanding among the Bay Staters, and as the Walpole-Needham event was likely to be the best of the afternoon at the Arena.

AT ARENA

Wellesley vs. Framingham
Needham vs. Walpole
B. C. High vs. Quincy.

AT GARDEN

Stoneham vs. Rindge.
Cambridge Latin vs. Melrose.
Newton vs. Medford.

Old Timers In Silver Skates

By Walter Kiley

Another fine chance to get in an early indoor practice session in preparation for the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby of January 26, is provided at the Boston Arena this afternoon.

From 3:30 to 5, Silver Skaters will find the Arena doors thrown open to them for only 20 cents, which includes the chance to indulge in general skating and later supervised speed workouts.

The opening sessions were well attended, Director Irving Jaffee being personally in charge.

Back in 1909 and 1910 he was speed skating champion of New England. Runs around these parts could equal his feats.

Of recent years he has dropped out of competition for the very good reason that there has been virtually none.

With him will be his brother, Frank, 45 years old, who, too, can show a flash which may be the envy of many of those years junior.

The Dannahys are tickled to pieces at the chance to enter competitive speed skating again. They feel that the American and Advertiser are performing a real service in stimulating interest in one of winter's finest outdoor sports.

There were 8,219 paid admissions a gross gate of $16,537 and a net of $9,727. The Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will receive 32½ per cent of the receipts after payment of Federal and State taxes.

THE PRELIMS

Dave Castillon of Waterville Me., scored a knockout over Johnny Bangs of Charlestown in the third round.

Joe Piccioti of the North End received the decision over Jim O'Boyne of Bangor, Me., at the end of six spirited rounds of milling.

RAILROADS

To Test RETIREMENT Act of '35

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

President John J. Pelley of the Association of American Railroads says a suit will be filed soon after January 1. It is expected the suit will be submitted in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Thus another Raw Deal measure is to be forced under the fire of those who see violation of rights under the Constitution. In the meanwhile the Railroad Retirement Commission has begun its study of the act in order to file with the incoming Congress a report in regard to the 1935 act or such substitute or amended legislation as it might suggest.

The argument as to whether or not tax selling is much of a factor this year continues without let-up. With seven sessions left this year the market seems to be saying that unless there is a marked pickup tax selling is not an important factor. In any event, we are not inclined to take it into consideration as a major element in arriving at conclusions as to the price trend. Important profits lie in the blue chip division and recessions there are of fair proportions and were overdue.

Notebook: Some of the blue chips such as Allied Chemical seem to have had enough correction . . . Taking tax selling into consideration and allowing for an over-bought condition a reaction of nearly 60 per cent from the high calls for a technical recovery at least . . . There are other such situations which fast traders should seek out for quick opportunities for profit . . . The motor group is putting up a stubborn battle . . . But the real test of the groups position will come early next year when a lull in operations looms.

War talk, and foreign political tangles remain to harass the market. Investors and traders alike are timid in the face of situations which might take a quick turn for the worse. This is natural enough. It must be added though that the market itself is doing fairly well and indicates a measure of internal strength that would enable it to stage at least a moderate technical recovery if given a chance. We are inclined to watch for a clearing of the news and an upswing rather than meditate on the grief that might come.

Shorts: Rubber shares have found a few friends. The American Institute Finance bulletin released today contains a thorough analysis of their position . . . U. S. Rubber, Goodrich and Goodyear are listed as a good combination speculation . . . New England building and engineering contracts awarded during the week ended December 17 registered a sharp gain . . . The figures compiled by F. W. Dodge Corp. are nearly $9,000,000 ahead of the comparable week in 1934.

Rail Earnings Wide Gains Shown

Earnings of the first six railroads to report for November, showing a gain of 17.8 per cent in gross revenues and 59.8 per cent in net operating income over a year ago, together with forecasts for the current month indicate that many of the carriers in the country for the full year will show material improvement over 1934.

These reports, furthermore, more than substantiate earlier estimates, which placed November gross for all the roads at around $300,000,000.

Such a showing, the best for any November since 1930, indicates that for the country as a whole the railroads will show a net income for the month instead of the customary deficit of the last few years.

WOMEN'S SHOE Output High

Output of women's shoes for all factories in the country will this year exceed the output of 131,310,000 pairs in 1929, the peak year for shoe production.

October, 1935, output of 11,600,000 pairs was about 3,000,000 pairs above October, 1934, output. Output for ten months, 1935, totaled 125,000,000 pairs, which was about 5,000,000 pairs above output for 10 months of 1934, and about 6,000,000 pairs short of the total for 1929.

November and December output this year should exceed this 6,000,000 by a good margin.

Excess Reserves Cut 600 Million

Increasing monetary circulation, incident to Christmas demands, also contributed to the cut in excess funds, which totaled $600,000,000.

As of December 18 surplus reserves were $2,710,000,000, paralleling early October. They compared with $3,310,000,000, the peak, on December 11.

Until money in circulation finds its way back to the banks after the holidays the likelihood is that excess reserves will not make big gains. The increase in circulation last week was $61,000,000.

The seven days before Christmas usually bring another gain of close to $100,000,000. Money outstanding remains at its high level until after the New Year.

STOCK MARKET

Prices STRONG AT Close

New York, Dec. 21—A bullish demonstration in motors and aviations brought a strong close to the stock market today in a continuation of yesterday's recovery.

The rise in the auto list again reflected the stimulus anticipated from predictions that Congress would pass the bonus next month. Chrysler sold up over a point and ruled around its high for the year. General Motors was heavily bought. Accessories gained in sympathy.

Douglas and United Aircraft hit new highs, with gains around two points each, to set a fast pace for the aviation group on expectation of large military orders.

Mines improved with U. S. Smelting up around a point. Coppers were stronger. Gold shares were quiet.

Steels were little better than steady, reflecting the weakening in the price structure. Rails and utilities did relatively little and hovered around their previous closing levels.

A feature was an unexplained spurt in Cluett Peabody of 6 points at its peak to a new high.

Oil shares were in continued demand. Amerada rose around 2 points. Tidewater hit a new high. Liquor strengthened and industrials were firmer. Allied Chemical snapped back over 2 points. Trading was moderately active.

Cotton was strong and grains did little. Bonds were irregularly higher. Gold currencies were under renewed pressure.

Current Items

With a week-end truce in the silver situation, brokerage circles watched foreign political developments and domestic economic trends.

While the latest freight car loading figures were not quite up to expectations, early advices on November net operating income of the principal carriers appeared encouraging and prospects for traffic expansion in the forepart of 1936 were said to be hopeful.

Private estimates of automobile production this week indicated that the number of cars and trucks turned out reached a record for the period.

The Department of Commerce reported November factory sales of motor vehicles 398,024, compared with 375,021 in October and 83,482 in November last year.

French francs, at the start of foreign exchange dealings, were up .00¼ of a cent at 6.59¼ cents and sterling was unchanged at $4.93.

REVIVED TRADE Helps Recovery

L. H. Bean, economic advisor of the AAA in a statement on revived rural buying, says that from 1929 to the first quarter of 1933 farm cash income dropped 61 per cent and rural retail sales fell 57 per cent, and from the bottom of the depression to the present time, farm cash income has advanced 86 per cent and rural retail sales about 92 per cent.

This increase in rural purchasing power contributed to about 40 per cent of the industrial improvement, he said.

Sanford Mills

Sanford Mills declared a dividend of $1 per share, payable December 24 to stock of record December 16. This is the same amount as paid on August 31 and January 18, last.

Year Teaches U. S. REGIMENTATION UNDER NRA Will Not Work

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Dec. 21—As we draw near the end of another year, we can see that we have learned much—also that we have much to learn.

For example, we have learned that it is not possible to raise or lower the general level of prices at will. Even Roosevelt has ceased to talk about it.

First we tried "open market operations," that is, having the reserve banks buy government bonds, thus paying currency out into circulation. Then we tried gold devaluation and treasury buying. Then we tried silver buying.

All have been futile, and most of us now recognize the fact.

Again, we have learned that industrial regimentation under the NRA scheme does not work. Roosevelt seems to cling to the idea, but most of us have learned the lesson.

We found that it led to monopolies and to high costs. We found that the cost of living was raised so fast that the consumer resistance hurt business.

We have also learned that there is no compromise between business and socialism. The business leaders and bankers at first tried to "co-operate" with the New Deal. They have now found that the Tugwell-Ickes side of the Roosevelt administration makes this impossible.

So the issue between business and the New Deal is out in the open.

What, then, are the things that we have yet to learn? I would emphasize two following points:

1—We have to learn the disastrous futility of letting the government provide. We have to learn that as long as "The Government" is regarded as the agency to deal with unemployment there will be unemployment.

Most people today say that unemployment is our great problem. Even those who believe we have had a great recovery say this. Why does such a condition exist?

First, because employers are in many ways kept from making profitable employment. The continued monetary uncertainty greatly limits investment in industrial expansion.

At the same time, policies concerning labor re-organization and wages drive business men to use more electrical power and machinery in order to keep expenses down. High taxes retard business.

The policy of "make work" and boondoggling demoralizes many people. It makes the lazy lazier, and tends to make all less eager to find really productive employment.

We will have a problem in abnormal unemployment as long as we have the New Deal.

2—We have yet to learn the danger of government debt. This debt means "deficit financing," according to which short-term government paper is loaded into the banks. There it becomes the basis for our currency.

The largest single item in our bank assets is "treasury notes." Thus, government debt is the chief basis of our bank credit and our currency.

And this makes government spending so easy that the Roosevelt administration keeps on its vicious CWA-FERA-PWA program. And the more "relief" it gives this way, the more it has to give.

What should we do?

We should abandon the delusion that the government "Works Administration" is productive employment of labor. We should admit that business "recovery" must come before real "progress" can be made. We should cut out the boondoggling.

Then we should make "relief" a local problem.

This would enable the government to quit borrowing, and to balance the budget. It could then quit unloading its short-term debts on the banks and insurance companies.

Then monetary certainty could be restored, and the private employment of capital labor.

Then real employers would be able to employ the unemployed. The drain of relief expenditures would be reduced. The budget could be balanced. We would know what a dollar is.

U. S. PACIFISTS LEAGUE LINK REVEALED

New York, Dec. 21—Radical revision of American neutrality laws, directly linking our neutral rights with action by the League of Nations, was approved by the National Peace Conference in its three-day secret meeting at the Westchester Country Club this week.

Details of a "tentative and confidential" draft of a bill to be introduced in Congress and to be pressed for adoption by lobbyists of the Internationalist organizations represented at the meeting were learned exclusively by the New York American today.

The measure proposes to give the President unbridled powers by which the United States might be embroiled in international complications.

Opponents of similar past proposals have charged they violated the constitutional right reserved to Congress to declare war.

SIX PROPOSALS.

The "neutrality" bill was one of six national peace conference proposals that have aroused a nation-wide storm of protest. Others included an attack on the R. O. T. C. in colleges, a scheme to scuttle the Army-Navy appropriation bill, opposition to the Army and Navy sedition bill and a nationwide radio campaign for "peace education."

The "neutrality" measure was drafted by a committee headed by Dr. James T. Shotwell, director of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, which helps finance the conference.

Accompanying the draft was a "commentary" in which the visionary provisions of the bill were described as follows:

"Requesting the President to enter into negotiations with signatories of the Pact of Paris with a view to concluding a supplementary treaty to clarify the rights and duties of neutrals.

"Authorizing the President to place an embargo on other essential war materials, defined as other articles or commodities essential to the continuing conduct of war. This section gives the President discretion as to when an embargo should be imposed and the articles to be included.

"Authorizing the President in certain cases to apply quotas restricting the trade with neutrals in war materials to normal peacetime levels.

"Stating it is the intention of Congress that losses resulting from the embargo of war materials not arms, ammunition or implements of war shall be distributed and borne by the people of the United States.

CAN FORBID LOANS

"Authorizing the President to forbid loans and credits to belligerents.

"Authorizing the President, with the consent of Congress, to lift any or all embargoes against a state which has been attacked in violation of a treaty."

The blanket embargo is frankly described in the "commentary" as "a complete severance of trade relations with all belligerent countries."

The committee called for "international agreement defining clearly the rights and duties of the United States in cases where the sanctions on the League of Nations are being applied."

Home After Outdoor Nap

None the worse, apparently, for his all-night snooze under the steps of a house two doors away from his home in Hillside avenue, Swampscott, eight-year-old Donald Lee is cosily ensconced in his own bed, with all the nice, hot cocoa he can drink. Police and his parents searched for him for hours.

Protests Flay York Archbishop

The latest attack on American institutions by the Most Reverend William Temple, Archbishop of York, aroused a new storm of protest today.

Following the prelate's criticism of one of the statutes of Massachusetts—the teachers' oath law—in a speech at Ford Hall Forum, Representative Cornelius P. Donovan of Lynn issued a statement in which he virtually invited the British primate to quit the country.

The archbishop declared that teachers in universities must have the freedom to speak their own convictions and there must be absolutely no censure or fetters by critical authorities.

"The learned divine who has been imposing upon our hospitality too long is apparently not content with efforts to embroil the United States in Europe's troubles through the League of Nations. He must now discuss the advisability of statutes enacted by the General Court of a state whose misfortune it is to be his host.

"To him and the hundreds of others like him who come to the United States to scoff at our institutions and deride our laws, I say: 'Cease your carping criticisms of American institutions, or leave the country.'

"The teachers' oath law is merely an outward sign of a patriotic force which motivates all American teachers worthy of the name. It is not a curb on liberty, but rather a manifestation of it."

ARLINGTON ROAD HIT

Fixit Urged To Protest Condition

By MR. FIXIT

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

J. M. D. of Carl road, Arlington, writes:

"Could you interest the proper parties in the town of Arlington in the terrible condition of the road surfaces at the summit of Washington street and request them to fill the numerous holes in said street. Some of these holes are of sufficient depth to break the springs of cars traveling over this area and to injure occupants.

"This section of Washington street has not been accepted, but the residents who have use of this road would greatly appreciate a few loads of filling for this purpose."

"Mr. Fixit" will investigate, and see what can be done.

• • • •

A. F. L. of Dudley street, Roxbury, writes:

"I wonder if you can get the Elevated to stop surface cars just outside the Dudley terminal going to Uphams Corner."

You will have to send a diagram showing the location of the points, also send information as to the distances involved.

Pictorial, Excella Patterns Sold

New York, Dec. 21—Announcement was made today by Richard E. Berlin, president of Pictorial Review and general manager of the Hearst magazines, that the Pictorial and Excella Pattern companies have been sold to the Simplicity Pattern Company, which will continue Pictorial Patterns under this name as modernized and developed by the Hearst interests.

The Hearst magazine organization will concentrate on the development of Pictorial Review magazine, which under Hearst ownership has had a steady growth in advertising lineage and circulation. Four hundred thousand new readers were added in 1935.

Announcement will shortly be made of Pictorial Review's plans for editorial expansion during 1936, which will be supported by a powerful national promotion campaign.

Guns in the Night

Adventurer and Three Pals Caught in Miniature Crime Wave

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, when a guy gets in trouble, generally his first thought is: "Boy, I wish there was a cop around to get me out of this." And if there IS an officer around, the chances are he can get you out of almost any sort of jam in the world. The police are called on at all hours of the day and night, to do everything from straightening out a family argument to catching a cat that's crawled up a tree and won't come down. But here's the story of a group of boys who couldn't call on the cops when they got into trouble. In fact, it was the police who were making all the trouble for Frank Zappala of Brooklyn, N. Y., and for his three pals.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Not that Frank had done anything to deserve all that attention from the New York police department. All he was doing was trying to get over to New Jersey. There are some funny laws on the statute books, I'll admit, but there isn't any against going to New Jersey, so Frank was entirely within his rights when he tried to dig up the half buck he needed to get through the Holland Tunnel.

But things were happening around New York that night that Frank and his friends didn't know about. Old Lady Adventure was setting the stage for big doings—and she used the cops for actors in the drama she staged with Frank in the leading role.

Frank and his friends started out one September evening for a ride in a car that belonged to one of the fellows' dads. They had the car—but little money. There was only 20 cents in cash in the whole crowd, and they wanted to go over to New Jersey to see some friends they had over there.

Going to Jersey, though, cost 50 cents—the price of admission to the Holland Tunnel. So Frank suggested that one of the other lads—a fellow named Jim—sell an old dollar-and-a-half watch that he carried.

Jim was agreeable, and handed over the watch. Frank got out of the car and went looking for a customer for it.

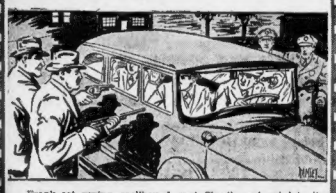
The car was parked at the foot of Wall street and it was around ten-thirty at night. Prospective watch-buyers were few and far between. As a matter of fact there was only one man in sight, and all the money he had was 20 cents. The boys needed 30 cents, so it was just no sale.

They drove the car down to the Battery and tried again. A street cleaner was working there, and they offered the watch to him. He didn't want it, but he talked to the boys for a while. And then—suddenly—things began to happen.

A police car shot around the corner, siren screaming, and sped off down the street, going about 65 miles an hour. About 10 seconds later another one followed it, going even faster than the first.

Both cars disappeared around another corner before the boys even had a chance to get a good look at them. The street cleaner ran for the corner to get a last look at them, and the four boys climbed back into their own car.

Jim got in front and took the wheel. Frank was in the back seat with a lad named Charlie. While Jim was starting the motor Frank turned to Charlie and said: "What luck we've got. We can't even sell a watch!" And then he saw Charlie's hands go up in the air—heard him cry out: "Don't shoot, mister—don't shoot!"



Frank sat gazing, spellbound, past Charlie and out into the street. Two men were standing there—detectives, they looked like—pointing sawed-off police rifles into the back seat of the car. Two uniformed police came up then, and one of the detectives opened the door and yanked Charlie out of the car. Another poked a rifle into Frank's midriff and told him to climb out, too. And up ahead the two boys in the front seat were also being pulled out onto the pavement.

By this time there were eight policemen and detectives clustered around the car. A couple more were inside, going through it with a fine-toothed comb "Where are the guns?" they asked Frank. "Where are the other two fellows?"

All four boys said they didn't have any guns—didn't know anything about any two other fellows—but they couldn't convince the cops. A robbery had been committed in the neighborhood, and those lads answered the description of the men.

They were carted off to the station house—fingerprinted, questioned. They hadn't been there long before they realized that they were in trouble—likely to be put on trial for a crime they had no hand in.

Where were they when the robbery was committed? That's the question the police kept asking them. And their answer: "Parked on a corner down by the Battery," was not good enough.

Then Frank thought of the street cleaner. If the police could only find him he could back their story. Frank told the detective captain, and the captain sent a man out to bring him in. He got there about 15 minutes later.

"Did you ever see these boys before?" the detectives asked him.

"Sure I did," he replied. "I was talking to them for 20 minutes, just before the police cars came shooting around the corner."

And that was all the cops wanted to know. But for a half hour or so it sure looked to Frank as though four guys were going to jail for the heinous crime of trying to get to Jersey City.

WALLACE BEERY AND DAUGHTER BROADCAST

By N. F. T.

Come close to the heart of a seemingly gruff, blustering person and find sentimentality personified, so runs my experience.

Accordingly, it's good to set forth how big Wallace Beery is bringing his little four-year-old daughter to the "mike" as a "Ch a teau" guest artist (WEEI) tonight between 9:30 and 10:30 o'clock.

N. F. T.

Pretty young Carol Ann Beery is due to carol a Christmas carol for her daddy and the nation-wide air audience during the above 60-minute coast to coast program. Papa is proud, of course. Ernestine Schumann-Heink is also on the program guest list for her traditional "Stille Nacht" yuletide impression, a vocal classic long identified with the career of the venerable and beloved contralto soloist.

Fat Binford will resume his role of long standing as master-of-ceremonies of the "Corn Cob Pipe Club" for the first time this season, with broadcast of this evening (WEEI) from 10:30 to 11 p. m.

The festive spirit of the broadcast, which will be in the nature of a crossroads Christmas party, will be heightened by the welcoming ceremonies which the rest of the cast will extend to their genial co-worker.

Just ten years ago, in December, 1925, Harry Reser and his orchestra, the Eskimos, began a series of broadcasts that made his name a national byword. The series lasted for seven and a half consecutive years.

Now after a lapse of two and a half years, Harry Reser and his Eskimos return to the airwaves tonight.

The new series will go on the air for a half-hour (WNAC) at 8 o'clock on Saturdays, over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, Mayor Sinclair Weeks, Major General Daniel Needham, Major Richard Whitcomb, and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien will be the principal speakers on the big broadcast to be held Sunday night over stations WBZ and WBZA from the Hotel Bradford for the benefit of the more than 4000 Massachusetts disabled veterans confined to government hospitals in this state and elsewhere. It's an all-star affair to begin at 10 o'clock and proceed into the night or morning hours.

MOVIE MIXUPS

BY ART MOGER

How's your Hollywood memory? If it's really good you should know all of the above movie stars as they appear at Manager J. J. Dempsey's Lynn Paramount Theatre in "So Red the Rose" and "Two Sinners." The stars in the lower left and right might stick you, but you should know them. Can you answer the question, too?

If you can decode their names from the batch of mixed up letters near their cartoon likenesses you may share in one of many valuable awards offered weekly by the Boston Evening American, absolutely FREE!

Be sure you answer the daily question pertaining to the career of one of these stars. Weekly prize winners are announced in these columns every Monday.

In addition to the handsome Automatic Junior Automobile radios, there are cash awards totalling $75 and 150 guest theater tickets to be distributed free to correct solvers of "Movie Mixups," latest Hollywood cartoon series.

All you have to do is correctly unscramble the above mixed up letters near the cartoon likenesses of the Hollywood star. Mail your completed week's solution (six of them) to the Movie Mixups Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. Neatness, accuracy, promptness and originality in presentation will decide weekly winners. A new series begins on Monday!

These Automatic Junior automobile radios are all 5-tube superheterodyne sets with these exclusive features: Will fit any standard make car, dustproof construction, no spark plug compressors needed on most cars, dynamic speaker, automatic volume control, direct tuning illuminated dial and simple installation. These sets are made in New England by the Automatic Radio Manufacturing Company of Boston.

Concern to Give Needy Radio Sets

A radio in every home is the goal of the Berman Radio Company, who will give away free trade-in radios on Christmas Eve between 6 and 9 p. m. at their main store, 62 Stuart street, Boston.

Eli Berman

Eli Berman, treasurer of the company, hopes that no one will be without a radio because they cannot afford one. Radios that are traded in at the Berman store for new sets will be distributed to the needy. He said:

"We are planning to take care of as many of these folks this Christmas as possible."

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION — TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

A challenge to all Junior Birdmen squadrons for a contest of stick models, scale models and beginners' gliders, has been issued by members of the aviation club of the English High School, Boston.

William Shea

The challenge was voiced by Commander Shea who added: "You can tell 'em we've got fire in our eyes and chips on our shoulders and will show those who accept our dare some of the classiest flying yet seen at South Armory. In the meantime we intend to claim the public school model flying championship at least."

Among the members are Sanford Oringer, 46 Mascot street, Dorchester, and Morris Sulkin, 48 Compton street, Boston.

A couple of kits will be awarded to the first squadron which defeats Shea's group, it was announced. Commanders who wish to accept the challenge should get in touch with Shea and arrange details.

More than 1035 flight units have now been organized in the Boston American wing of the Junior Birdmen. Among the latest commanders are:

(Membership is open to all boys and girls 10 to 21 years of age, inclusive.)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I inclose a ten-cent coin (well wrapped) for my membership materials.

3 Bids and Proposals

ABOLITION OF GRADE CROSSING
U. S. Works Program Grade Crossing Project No. W. P. G. M. 360
CITY OF QUINCY
Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Department of Public Works
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals for the following work will be received by the State Department of Public Works at its office, 100 Nashua Street, Boston, Mass., until 12 o'clock noon of Tuesday, January 7, 1936, and at that place and time will be publicly opened and read: Abolition of a grade crossing in the City of Quincy consisting of the construction of a steel bridge over the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Water Street, construction of a box bridge at Town Brook, construction of drainage and water systems, construction of about 760 square yards of bituminous concrete surfacing on the bridge and construction of about 14,600 square yards of bituminous macadam or Penolithic type surfacing (the type to be built to be decided by the Department after the opening of the bids), and other miscellaneous work.

Plans may be seen and forms of specifications and contract may be obtained at the office of said Department.

A pamphlet containing the Itemized Proposal with Special Provisions may be obtained on receipt of a deposit of $2.00, which amount will be returned if the person taking the pamphlet makes a bid for the work on the form provided in said pamphlet, or returns the pamphlet at or before the time of the opening of the bids.

All bids must be accompanied by a surety bond accepted and approved by the Department or by a certified check payable to the Department for the amount of $7000.00.

The check or bond must not be included in the sealed envelope with the proposal but must be delivered to the Financial Secretary of the Department who will give a proper voucher for the deposit.

Special attention of bidders is called to the minimum rates of wages prescribed by the State Department of Labor and Industries in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 461 of the Acts of 1935 (to which the Contractor's attention is directed), appearing in the Special Provisions as follows: Laborers—$0.625; Teamsters, Truck Drivers, Grader and Bulldozer Tractor Operators—$0.65; Mason tenders—$0.70; Blasters, Electrical worker-helpers (one helper to 3 journeymen)—$0.75; Blacksmiths, Granite cutters, Painters—$1.00; Pile Drivers—$1.075; Carpenters—$1.15; Stone cutters—$1.175; Iron workers (structural and reinforcing steel-rigging-welding), Master mechanics, Roller operators—$1.20; Bricklayers, Catch basin and Manhole builders, Cement finishers, Electrical workers, Stone masons, Waterproofers—$1.25; Operators of 2 drum machines—$1.375; Engineer (operators of shovel crane digging machine or any other three drum type)—$1.50.

The name and address of the local registration office of the United States Reemployment Service, from which employee lists for this contract shall be obtained (as required in Paragraphs I and IV of the Special Contract Provisions), will be supplied later but will be in the general locality of the work.

The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, or to accept the proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth.
